The Art of Islam

by Hofrat Ing. Hubert Gerzabek<sup>1</sup>

Copyright © 2020

The defining moment of all Islamic art is to be found in the Koran, the holy book of Islam. The Koran consists of 99 sūrahs (sections) and determines not just the life of the devout Muslim, but also the development of Islamic art.

Since Islam forbids the depiction of Allāh, the Prophet Muhammad and human beings, Islamic art was barred from such pictorial representations. Artists had to shift into using varied forms of ornamentations instead, as we will see on buildings again and again. The floral patterns or the ornaments are designed with so much imagination and diversity as in no other art form.

ornamentation.

Fig. 4: Postcard of the Prophet's Mosque (mid-20th century).

The first building of Islam was a small mosque in Medina, followed by the construction of the Ka'ba, the great holy shrine of Islam. The rapid spread of the faith in the Arab region very soon produced significant works of art that are still marvelled at today.

Fig. 7: The Ka'ba in the Holy Mosque, Mecca.

Thus, the first buildings were mosques, followed later by impressive palaces. However, the structural development and design of the mosques is particularly interesting to observe. The Arab mosques were columned hall mosques, which were later transformed into central dome buildings, modelled on the Hagia Sophia in Istanbul.

Figs. 11–12: Umayyad mosque, Damascus: pillared hall mosque.

Islam soon spread beyond the Arab region, and other peoples became followers of Islam as well. Thus, there was a second component that influenced Islamic art. The artistic characteristics of these peoples were naturally reflected in the construction and design of mosques. Thus we find, particularly during the Seljuqs era, elaborate artistic stonemasonry. Seljuq buildings show amazing ornaments carved into stone.

Figs. 17–19: Masjed-e Shāh (King's Mosque, now Imam Mosque), Isfahan (17th century).

The Ottomans progressed from the pillared hall mosque to a domed building and the artistic decoration of Ottoman mosques is on a very high level. There are many marble and faïence decorations as well as fresco paintings in the mosques.

Figs. 20–22: Suleymaniye Mosque, İstanbul (16th century).

Persian Islamic buildings are particularly impressive, covered with faïence tiles on both the exterior and interior, with the faïence domes of the mosques catching the eye.

In Pakistan, the Indian influence can be observed especially with domes, which are very different from the Ottoman and Persian ones. Byzantine churches converted into mosques in Turkey, especially in Istanbul, cannot be considered as Islamic buildings.

Mail from Perim Island (Yemen) (II)

by Folkert Bruining

Since the publication of my article in MEPB 17, a few more postal items and facts have come to light, which I would like to share with the public.

Hornal & al.

In the article by Ot Louw and me in MEPB 17 the informative article of Charles Hornal<sup>1</sup> was not mentioned explicitly. Of course this article is an important source of information so I will mention some interesting facts here.

His description of the postal arrangements since 1857 is especially clear and he gives detailed information: From 1857 the mail from and to Perim was carried by sea. Whether this was done by accidentally passing ships or on a more or less regular basis (e.g. by supply ships)<sup>2</sup> is not described in detail but it was nevertheless unreliable.

The Camel Dawk 1877

A first 'regular' overland mail, the camel dawk,<sup>3</sup> was established in 1871. The mail was brought by camel to the coast near Perim and from there by steamer to the island. In 1890 the camel dawk was abandoned due to unreliability. The mail carried by sea was resumed. Lieutenant King briefly described this connection in an article of 1877:<sup>4</sup>

There is a postal connection with Aden twice a month. This is done by camel mail. The postman lights a large fire after arriving at the Bab-el-Mandeb Strait to inform the lighthouse keeper of his presence. If the weather is not too bad, a boat is immediately sent to receive the mail; otherwise the Perim 'exiles' may wait days for their correspondence.

It would be very much to be hoped that a better connection would soon be established with the rest of the world; a steam ferry, for example, would be an urgent need, but the inclusion of the island in telegraphic traffic deserves all the more consideration given that the Red Sea cable runs past the island at a distance of less than 3 km; sufficient care is only taken for communication with passing ships by means of signals.

So a reliable mail connection with the rest of the world was highly desirable. According to Hornal the Aden Official Report for 1892/93 mentions the setting up (in 1887) of sub post offices at Berbera and Zaila (Somaliland) and observes:

The steam communication established with the Somali Coast for a monthly subsidy (including Perim) of Rs. 600 has greatly increased postal facilities.

3 Dawk or Dak was an Anglo-Indian transport system carrying goods, incl. mails, and persons from station to station originally by runners or "coolies" in (nightly) relays.

4 King, 1877. Re-translated from the German.

In spite of the fact that in 1892/93 Perim had no post office of its own, postal facilities were apparently improved. It is very interesting to read Hortal quoting from the Aden Report of 1895/96 that:

The Branch Post Offices at Khor Maksar, Sheikh Othman, Perim and the Somali Coast continued to work satisfactory during the year under Report.

This was repeated in the Report of 1896/97. The status of the Perim post office was not quite clear. The Indian Postal Guide of 1903 does not mention this sub post office. Maybe what is meant by “sub post office” is a postal agency set up by the Perim Coal Company, as early as 1887 (perhaps 1883),<sup>5</sup> as we described in MEPB 17.

“Rembrandt meets Queen Wilhelmina”

You are always surprised by things you find on eBay. Such as the postcard below from British India (fig. 1). Judging by the text on the back, the card was written on the way to Perim during the voyage in the Gulf of Aden. The writer was a passenger on board the S.S. Rembrandt of Dutch shipping line Stoomvaart Maatschappij Nederland (S.M.N.).

Strange is the combination of the Indian postcard with the ship’s cancel “POSTAGENT BATAVIA – AMSTERDAM”. Why? To answer this conundrum we have to read the U.P.U. regulations, Hosking once wrote an entire article on this subject.<sup>6</sup> During the U.P.U. congress of 1891 the subject of mail generated on board of ships was discussed and resolved in an article, slightly amended in later conventions.

The U.P.U. Convention of 1906 states in article 11, paragraph 5:<sup>7</sup>

Articles posted on the high seas in the letter box on board a vessel or placed in the hands of postal agents on board or of the commanders of ships may be prepaid by means of the postage stamps, and according to the tariff of the country to which the said vessel belongs or by which it is maintained. If the mailing on board takes place during the stay at one of the two terminal points of the voyage or at any intermediate port of call, prepayment can only be effected by means of the postage stamps and according to the tariff of the country in the waters of which the vessel happens to be.

The Convention’s “Detailed Regulations” say in article IX, paragraph 4:<sup>8</sup>

The stamping of correspondence deposited on board Packets<sup>9</sup> in the movable boxes or in the hands of the postal agents on board or of the commanders devolves, in the cases contemplated by paragraph 5 of Article 11 of the Convention, upon the postal agent on board, or, if there be none, on the Post Office to which the correspondence is handed over for disposal. In the latter case this Office marks the correspondence with its ordinary date stamp, and with the word “Paquebot” either in manuscript or by means of an autograph stamp or an ordinary stamp.

So if the S.S. Rembrandt was in international waters (and she indeed was ‘on the high seas’ when the card was written and posted on board) there was no need to use a British-Indian postcard. As far as I know, the postal agent of the ship was not allowed to cancel the British-Indian postcard with a Dutch ship cancel, although the U.P.U. rules of that time are not quite compelling.

The card is cancelled "Postagent Batavia – Amsterdam" on 26.03.1908. The card was despatched on Perim and sent from there to the post office in Aden where it was cancelled on 29.03.1908. Given the lack of other postmarks, the card likely reached S.S. Wilhelmina on her way to the Dutch East Indies.<sup>10</sup>

When anchored in Perim, it had to be handed over, uncanceled, to the postal agent on Perim. Perhaps, in this case, it was the benevolence of the ship's postal agent to cancel the card on demand? Tolerated by the Aden authorities. Who knows? I never saw an example before.

Fig. 2: On the reverse it says: "Gulf of Aden 25 March / B.J. We can be at Perim by 12 o'clock tonight."

In 1908 Perim did not (yet) have a post office with its own postmark, let alone a paquebot hand-stamp. As a rule mail was forwarded to Aden where it was cancelled.

However, the opposite was possible as well. When (for example) a British-Indian postcard was deposited in the letterbox of a Dutch ship, the postage stamp was cancelled on departure with that ship's postmark. After the post office was established in 1915 Perim got an own postmark, According to Hosking a paquebot mark for Perim did not exist.<sup>11</sup>

Non-Dutch Steamers

Fig. 5: A slightly damaged British-India postcard (and part of reverse) written and posted at Perim on 29.06.1900 by one of the passengers on board S.S. Prins Alexander (S.M.N.) bound for the Dutch East Indies.

Fig. 5 is an Indian postcard posted at Perim and destined for Djokjakarta ("Djocja"). As usual the card was taken to Aden where it was cancelled (30th June 1900). Since Dutch ships on their way to the Indies usually did not call at Aden, the card was given to a (probably) British or French ship, perhaps S.S. Arcadia of P&O (Peninsular & Oriental Steam Navigation Company). In such cases the mail destined for the Dutch East Indies was presented by the companies in a closed and sealed mailbag to the Dutch East Indies postal agent in Singapore or Penang.<sup>13</sup>

Our card was sent via the postal agent in Singapore (see square postmark “N.-I. AGENT SINGAPORE”). In Singapore the mail was sorted and further forwarded to its destination in the Dutch East Indies.

A Riddle

Fig. 7: Picture postcard sent from Perim on 12.10.1915<sup>15</sup> to Bandoeng (Bandung, Java)<sup>16</sup> via Aden (14.10.1915). The card is cancelled with the rare long-bar postmark of the Perim post office.

Proud distinguishes three types. The postmark type on the card was used from 1915 to 1921.<sup>17</sup>

<sup>15</sup> Cf. Storm van Leeuwen, 1989. During World War I, mail traffic through the Suez Canal by Dutch mailboats was possible until 23rd December 1915. In March 1919, regular mail services were resumed.

<sup>16</sup> The address is “Patoeha Wati”, a tea and cinchona (for the production of quinine) plantation south of Bandung.

The Dutch text on the card reads in translation:

Dear people! Today we arrived in Port Said – a nice ‘kampong’.<sup>18</sup> We are only 7 passengers, but fortunately a nice club. We’re having great fun.<sup>19</sup> Someone who feels a lot for planimetry can study beautiful lines here. Oh, my head, my head. Soon more with warm greetings from both of us. Yours...Carel, Carla(?)’.

Carel and Carla clearly travelled from Port Said to Perim. If they sailed on a Dutch ship, it must have been S.S. Goentoer, which was in Port Said in early October 1915 (4th or 5th October), according to the newspapers of the time. The card was also bought and written there, but was mailed at Perim. According to Proud, a post office had opened earlier that year.<sup>20</sup>

The destination of the card was the Dutch East Indies, but this was most likely also the destination of Carel and Carla. This means that the postcard arrived there later than both passengers. It is a pity that the card has no other postmarks, e.g. of the Dutch East Indies postal agent in Singapore.

Some more details: The postmarks of Perim and Aden are clearly printed over the written text, and thus after the writing. This is proof that the card was processed through the postal service in a regular manner.<sup>21</sup> The front of the card shows traces of cancellation (applied to other postal items), a kind of offset.

<sup>21</sup> Theoretically, it is possible that a mint souvenir card with only postmarks on it has been inscribed afterwards in order to turn it into a ‘genuinely processed’ postal item. I have many examples of this in my collection, but I do not know of any with a combination of postmarks of both Perim and Aden.

A Visit to the Quarantine Station at Anatoli-Kawak on the Bosphorus in 1884

found by Tobias Zywietz

Copyright © 2021

In one of his articles on the history of the Austrian Post Office in Constantinople, Andreas Patera looked at quarantine practice in 1880 Constantinople and quotes a section from a topical report published in an 1884 German journal.<sup>1</sup>

[...] officials of the Austrian post office in Constantinople sometimes had to work directly on the shore of the Bosphorus, namely when they were assigned to supervise the disinfection process in the quarantine station at Anatoli-Kawak.<sup>2</sup> All the other foreign post offices in the Turkish capital weren't spared this procedure as they had to appoint also one staff member to be commanded there.

A representative of the German Post Office in Constantinople, which had been established in 1870/71, summed up his impressions in this report of 1884, entitled "A Visit to the Quarantine Station at Anatoli-Kawak on the Bosphorus" as published by DEUTSCHE VERKEHRS-ZEITUNG. We reproduce an excerpt presenting the interesting facts contained in the report:

There is a complete lack of buildings to accommodate the quarantined travellers in Anatoli-Kawak. All persons must therefore complete the quarantine on board their ship. The mail is brought ashore immediately after the arrival of the ships; the letters and printed matter are subjected to fumigation there and then, while the samples of goods and postal parcels are sent back on board the ship and are only delivered to post offices after the five-day quarantine period has expired.

The quarantine is, of course, to the highest degree annoying and aggravating for the post offices of Constantinople. However, provided one admits that the contagious carrier of cholera can be disseminated through letters, amongst other means, one must regard the introduction of the fumigation procedure at Constantinople as perfectly justified. Constantinople is as lively a postal exchange as the epicentre of cholera, Marseille. This has been accelerated by the establishment of the Orient Express trains, resulting in letters from Marseille arriving here within four days. The mails from Europe arrive in Constantinople twice a week from Varna and regularly consist of 50 to 60 large letter bags as well as an even more significant number of small letter bags.

The ship lands around 5 o'clock in the morning at Anatoli-Kawak. For the postal staff which must be present at the fumigation, the Austro-Hungarian Lloyd provides a large steam-pinnace. On our trip, which we started at 3 o'clock in the morning, we enjoyed one of the incomparably beautiful mild moonlight nights only the Bosphorus can offer. Only in the hour before sunrise, it gets quite severely cold. On our steam-pinnace we find represented 7 or 8 nations and hear spoken at least a dozen different languages, because all post offices of Constantinople have sent their representatives to collect the mail.

On our arrival at Kawak we see a large number of steamers of all nations moored and maintaining their quarantine. Despite the early hour many people are on the decks to dispel the terrible boredom by watching newly arriving fellow sufferers from Varna and the fumigation of mail.

The fumigation devices set up at Kawak are of a most rustic nature. The whole procedure is undertaken outdoors under a pair of giant elms standing directly on the seashore. The trees grant the interested parties some protection from the sun. Beneath these elms three large wooden fumigation boxes are positioned, from which the postal officials separated by a lattice-fence extending onto the seashore. Within this fenced-off area gather doctors appointed to oversee the fumigation and lower-ranked personnel of the quarantine office, mostly consisting of Turkish sailors. These are marked by yellow napkins or yellow collars, respectively, as being members of the quarantine staff.

Fig. 1: Here, at the entrance to the Black Sea, was the quarantine station for fumigating the mail – an adventurous process, as described in the following pages.<sup>3</sup>

After a short wait, two large rowing boats approach to bring the mail ashore. From far away you can hear the “Signore Capitano” rant and curse in his melodic language; one “Corpo di Dio” after another. At last they reach the shore and throw the bags ashore. Then the separation of sacks for the various local post offices (German, English, French, Austrian, Russian, and Turkish) begins.

This practice is particularly difficult, because the post office staff gets to see the bags only from a distance through the fence, so the inscription of labels cannot be seen. The quarantine’s sailors, naturally, cannot read. The German and English are in this respect favoured because their letter bags are recognizable from afar by their colours. After the separation procedure is successfully concluded the sailors begin to open the letter bags and the bundles of letters contained therein. They proceed with this, of course, in a manner which is heartbreaking for any postally minded person.

The postal officials try to influence the Turkish sailors, by flattery or insult, when at times they apply their methods of opening too cruelly. However, it does not usually help, and after a short while, despite all the cries “kusum” and “djannum” (my lamb, my soul), the entire post for one of the six post offices lies higgledy-piggledy on the ground. It is then immediately tossed into one of fumigation boxes. These boxes contain, about one foot above the ground, a wooden grate, on which all the mail is coming to rest. The lid of the box is then closed and a pan with sulphur is shoved under the grate. The sulphur is set on fire and the smoke goes through the slits in the grate to the letters laying above.

As one recognises immediately this method is extremely dangerous, especially when you take into account that the boxes stand outside. The lively sea breeze can stir the flames of the burning sulphur easily. In fact, right during the third round of fumigation an accident happened. The mail destined for the local French post office was already inside the fumigation box when all of a sudden unusually heavy smoke gushed out of the box. When the lid was lifted, heavy flames struck out from the letters. The lattice-fence was immediately stormed by postal staff and fortunately they managed to extinguish the fire quickly. The devastation caused by the fire in that short period however, was quite extensive. As far as could be determined, no letter has been completely destroyed, but a large amount of letters, newspapers and other printed matter were substantially damaged.

The persons who had entered the fenced area would have, actually, to undergo a five-day quarantine period according to the strict quarantine rules. On that occasion, however, this was refrained from. The fumigation of post usually takes 20 to 30 minutes, so once this time has elapsed, the contents of the fumigation box are handed over to the officials of the respective post office. They pack the contents in bags to be transported to Constantinople.

The samples of merchandise that were thrown aside by the sailors when unpacking the post and the empty bags that came from Varna are returned to the captain of the Lloyd ship to be delivered five days later in the city. The entire mail from Varna is usually opened after 3½ hours, fumigated, repacked and brought on board the steam-pinnace, which then transports the mails and postal staff as soon as possible back to the city where they usually arrive at 9:30 in the morning.

Since it is completely impossible to begin treating the post on board, all of the postal staff on the ship indulge themselves in perfect harmony to the pleasures of an oriental breakfast, usually made from sheep's cheese (tolum-penir), bread and a large amount of the exquisite water from Kawak. On the foredeck kavasses<sup>4</sup> and hamales<sup>5</sup> season their breakfast with a good amount of garlic and onions, the pungent smell of which reaches the European noses on the rear of the deck despite the strong north wind."

The Agony of Quarantine in Smyrna in 1890

found by Tobias Zywiets

Andreas Patera quotes in another article of his<sup>1</sup> a report first published in the German newspaper FRANKFURTER ZEITUNG in 1890.

To illustrate the sometimes grotesque situations, which often occurred during the regularly imposed quarantines in the Orient, here's a report in the FRANKFURTER ZEITUNG from Smyrna, which was reprinted in the DEUTSCHE VERKEHRS-ZEITUNG (Berlin, 24. 1890, pp. 280–281):

The trade situation is becoming more difficult every day, the port is empty and the roadstead is desolate. Most of the mail steamer companies have restricted their traffic with Smyrna to the utmost. Most of the steamers from Constantinople go directly to Greece, Syria and Egypt without calling at Smyrna as in the past.

Only a few steamers go to Clasomen, Smyrna's quarantine station located at Vourla, to disembark the mails there under special precautions and then continue their postal course.

Fig. 1:

Parcel post loading in the port of Smyrna (1902).<sup>2</sup>

The company “Messageries Maritimes” has threatened to cease completely their calls at Smyrna if this “farce d’une quarantaine” (farce of a quarantine) is not lifted soon. The foreign post offices, especially those of Germany, Austria, France, and England, dispatch officials to Vourla in order to receive their respective mails, after it got disinfected by quarantine officials.

2 Source: Patera, 1991 [5858], p. 21, with original caption.

The Mail is brought to Smyrna on steamboats, mostly small tugboats that are unemployed as a result of quarantine.

The third-ranked officer of the German Empire post office in Smyrna, who had recently arrived from Berlin, had the dubious pleasure of being sent to Vourla on his third day of presence in Smyrna, to receive the German mail there and to forward it.

Fig. 2:
The German post office of Smyrna.<sup>3</sup>

It is a good sign for our civil service that the young gentleman, who is a complete newcomer to the country and understands neither Turkish nor Greek, is doing a good job.

The quarantine-rules are sometimes carried out in a rather ridiculous manner. After receipt the mail bags are opened to be disinfected: the first 'pure' official from the steamer shoves the mailbags to his 'impure' colleague using any sort of tools, for them to be opened. The 'impure' official, by chance, has got no knife, so to help him the 'pure' official gives his knife into the hand of the 'impure' colleague.

After opening of the bags, the same knife goes back again from the hand of the 'impure' to the hand of the 'pure' official. The latter will, after completion of the fumigation treatment of the post, maybe just 20 minutes later, consume a piece of bacon or peel an orange aboard his outgoing mail steamer. Sometimes a snuffbox with cigarette paper wanders over, so that the colleague can relieve the hardship of his service with a rapidly rolled cigarette, etc.

Reports from the 1902 Cholera Epidemic in Palestine

by Tobias Zywiets

Cholera and other epidemics affected the Orient almost regularly until the 20th century, even in Europe and Germany this terrible disease broke out frequently. The wave dealt with here began in India in 1899 with violent outbreaks in Calcutta, Bombay and Madras. In 1900/01, a large-scale outbreak spread across Asia, first through Afghanistan, the Persian Gulf, Burma, and Singapore. Pollitzer describes it like this:<sup>1</sup>

Simultaneously with this spread to the east, cholera was carried in 1902 by the maritime route, presumably by pilgrims who left Madras, to the port of Jidda and from there to Mecca, where an outbreak beginning in the last week of February killed 4000 of the assembled multitude. Though every possible precaution was taken, it proved impossible to prevent an invasion of Egypt, where the disease, imported in some manner never elucidated, first became manifest in Asyut and then spread, claiming within three months almost 34000 victims [...]. In what way the infection penetrated early in this pandemic into Russia is difficult to decide. In the opinion of Sticker, an invasion of Syria, taking place via the Sinai Peninsula in 1903, was responsible for the appearance of cholera in the same year not only in Palestine, Asia Minor, and on the Black Sea coast, but also in Mesopotamia and Persia, from which latter country the disease was imported in the spring of 1904 by caravans via Samarkand into Baku on the Caspian Sea.

The path of the spread described here can also be observed in other cholera epidemic waves, e.g. in the 1860s. Trade and pilgrimage routes always played a decisive role in these epidemics.

For the specific outbreak of 1902, I found some contemporaneous reports, which also deal with postal disinfection measures. Some expressions and the general tone of European arrogance and supremacy are part of the then “Zeitgeist”. Unfortunately, I could not find any letters from Palestine in 1902 to illustrate the measures described: perforation and fumigation (smoking).

The DEUTSCHE VERKEHRS-ZEITUNG wrote in 1902 under the headline “The Effects of Cholera in South Palestine on Postal Traffic from Jaffa to Jerusalem”:<sup>3</sup>

Due to the occurrence of cholera in Gaza, Lydda, Jaffa and several other places in southern Palestine, the Conseil Supérieur de Santé in Constantinople imposed a 10-day quarantine on Jaffa on 17th October. Furthermore, from the same day onwards, Jaffa had sealed itself off from Jerusalem and the latter from Jaffa. For this purpose, two cordons had been drawn, one at the village of Jasur, 5 km from Jaffa, and the other at Bab-el-Wad, 27 km from Jerusalem.

Naturally, such a measure could not remain without influence on the postal traffic between Jaffa and Jerusalem. Thanks to the joint action of the German, French and Austrian post offices, however, major traffic restrictions were avoided. Even if the mail was not subject to the quarantine prescribed for other goods, it still had to be subjected to a disinfection procedure that was carried out “according to the rules of medical science” and varied according to the origin of the mail bags.

While it was sufficient to disinfect the outside of the mail bags that had arrived in Jaffa from the sea and were destined for Jerusalem and those sent from Jerusalem, the mail bags coming from Jaffa were opened because their contents came from a contaminated area; the mail items were perforated and exposed to sulphur vapours for about 10 minutes in a hermetically sealed room.

Letter traffic did not suffer any interruption. Packet traffic, on the other hand, had to be stopped as a result of the disinfection procedure, but, as we hear, has now already been restored.

A German postal official, W. Rothe (later Oberpostrat), who was stationed in Jaffa at the time, also reports on the procedures:<sup>4</sup>

While I was there, in one year, probably 1901,<sup>5</sup> there was a violent cholera epidemic in Jaffa. In order to protect the officials of the post office from infection, all letters had to be placed in a smoke box set up in the counter vestibule. With the relatively low traffic, this quite simple procedure was successfully carried out until the end of the epidemic; in any case, we did not get cholera.

4 Deutsche Verkehrs-Zeitung; 56. 1932, no. 7, p. 122.

5 Rothe is off by one year.

A Dutch newspaper describes the circumstances in a bit more detail. I will reproduce here the article with the report by a Mr. Julius Bolthausen from Solingen:<sup>7</sup>

This summer some German teachers went to the East on their holidays: a school walk on a grand scale, if you like, but not with the pupils. You see, German schoolteachers can afford more opulence than Dutch ones, although not all of them are in such good financial circumstances. The leader of the tour group was Mr. Julius Bolthausen from Solingen. To enable not only those who were able to go on the trip to enjoy it, but also those whose budgets constrains them, Mr Bolthausen, for a small fee, sent various reports etc. to all those who requested them. Perhaps our readers will not find this unpleasant to read.

For the time being we shall confine ourselves to a letter which Mr. B. received from Jerusalem last week and which gives a very sad picture of the present situation in the country. The writer asked B. not to mention his name, "because in the East it is forbidden to expose the truth".

For years now, all those who travel from Egypt to Palestine have had to undergo quarantine in order to prevent diseases prevailing in the Nile country from being carried to Syria.

The ships, which otherwise would drop their anchor at Jaffa, the old Joppe, connected by a railway line to Jerusalem, now have to sail to Beirut, the quasi port of Damascus, the healthiest place on the Syrian coast, where they have to stay for several days before passengers and goods can be unloaded.

This severely hampers traffic and many travellers are deterred from visiting Palestine. For the poor of the population tourist trade is one of the main sources of income. This summer there was not much custom, and when in mid-July cholera broke out in Egypt, brought there by pilgrims from Mecca, the holy city of the Mohammedans, the quarantine was extended to 12 days and traffic was held up even more.

On 15th October a telegram arrived in Jerusalem announcing the outbreak of cholera in Gaza, the strong old city of the Philistines, 20 minutes from the sea and now with 35,000 inhabitants. This news spread the fiercest terror in the capital; partly because now all hope on more income by foreigners' visits was reduced, partly because the feared disease would probably not remain limited to Gaza.

The governor and the mayor of Jerusalem sent some physicians to the stricken city, including one German, in fact the only one knowledgeable about cholera cases. What turned out to be the case? Cholera had been raging in Gaza for fourteen days, but this was kept secret. The Muslim simply thinks: "Allah has sent us the disease, Allah will take it away from us again", and in this fatalistic consciousness he hates all measures that science is now taking against infectious diseases. At last, when the matter could no longer be hushed up, they had sent a telegram to Jerusalem. The doctors who had been sent to Gaza could hardly obtain the most necessary foodstuffs, and even almost no food for their horses!

When they returned to Jerusalem, the doctors were not allowed to enter the city until they had been disinfected. When this was done they asked the Pasha for an audience to inform him of the situation in Gaza, but he was afraid to let them into his house and ordered them to return to their residences. So just two doctors and two pharmacists were sent to Gaza: they had to see how to cope with the situation.

Many sacrifices have already been made in Gaza; in one house no less than 17 people died in one day: the Turks are struggling in order to bury their dead as soon as possible. Part of the population – the Christians – have fled into the vineyards. Gangs of robbers have formed to exploit the general consternation to their heart's content. The village of Chân Jûnes, south of 7 Abridged from: De Zeeuw, 17. 1902, no. 25 (27.11.1902), p. 2. Bolthausen himself is likely the author of the report. Bolthausen organised package tours to Egypt and Palestine for many years. Cf. my article in MEPB 1.

Gaza, is deserted except for a few who have fled to Bêt-Dshala, near Bethlehem.

With the outbreak of the disease, trade and traffic have almost ceased; Gaza is a trading centre for grain, especially barley and wheat. It is astonishing how many sacks lie under the open sky, ready to be embarked – but no ship comes to fetch them, and even if one did, no one would dare to touch the grain gathered from the infected regions.

Now the government has, what is so typical of the Turks, restricted movement between the cities; anyone who wants to go from one to the other must undergo a ten-day quarantine before being admitted. This applies not only to those who come from Gaza, which would be understandable, but to all cities, even where there is no cholera at all. The mail coaches going from Jerusalem to Jaffa have to exchange horses and disinfect the mails on the way, although health is good in both places. The letters and parcels arriving in Jerusalem are punctured several times with an iron pin during disinfection, etc.

Now Egypt has found reason to also subject travellers from Palestine to quarantine and, in retaliation for the continuing quarantine imposed at Beirut, it is extending this quarantine.#

As a result, all traffic in Palestine is at a standstill now, no ship is loading or unloading. The available stock of foodstuffs is not very large and so it comes to pass that in four days prices have risen by 30 to 50% and they are rising a little more each day. Fearful disorder reigns in the country, which is facing a fearful future. The letter writer says: "Starvation typhus is imminent for the poor rural people who are unable to pay the price of food".

And what is the real cause of all this misery? The wretched state of the Turkish empire, again! Along the border between Palestine and Egypt there are military posts which, when cholera breaks out in Egypt, have to stop the traffic. This year in June, as was customary, a number of caravans had travelled from southern Palestine to Mecca.

When they arrived at the border posts, they were told they would not be allowed to enter the country on their return journey. But if they gave enough "baksheesh", they would not be hindered. They did so, the border guards were well paid and the Mecca pilgrims went on their way. Hardly had they arrived in the "holy city", many fell victim to cholera; others died on the return journey on the Red Sea. An entire caravan died between Suez and the Palestinian border; only one of the pilgrims dragged himself along to the border post and there dropped dead. What did the border guards do? They collected the camels and goods of the dead and sold them to Gaza; that is how the disease was transmitted. Furthermore, a number of sick and infected people who had given "baksheesh" were allowed into the country unhindered and spread the disease throughout the south of the country.

The WWI Censor Seals of the Ottoman Empire

by Philip Longbottom<sup>1</sup>

Copyright © 2021

Much has been written about censorship during World War I. OPAL has benefited for many articles on the subject, particularly from John Garton. In this article I confine myself to reviewing the sealing labels used by the Turkish censors, omitting local provisional labels. If any reader knows of any labels not shown in this article, then I would very appreciate being informed.

After the declaration of war in early 1914, the Turkish military set up censorship units in main post offices for non-military mail. All letters were to be posted unsealed with the language of correspondence, if not Turkish, written on the front. All letters for foreign destinations, except some to Persia, were to pass through Istanbul.

After censoring, letters were marked with a hand-stamp indicating that they had been inspected and generally also indicating the name of the place of censorship and the censor clerk's number. Sometimes date stamps were also applied by the censors.

There was little uniformity in the form of these hand-stamps from district to district. After censoring, the mail was passed back to the post office for onward transmission. However, the letters were passed back unsealed and hence there arose a need for official seals. These were predominantly labels and occasionally wax seals used both on foreign correspondence and also on some internal mail. Labels were first used about May 1915 and continued until the end of the war, although very few labels were used in the last few months of 1918. The labels were used only at five places, Istanbul, Edirne, Izmir, Baghdad and Manisa. Use of labels at the latter four places was very limited with Manisa being exceptionally scarce.

The labels shown below are the principal types. Rare and locally made sealing labels are not shown. Label illustrations are actual size. The various labels used in Istanbul overlapped to certain degree.

Note that the darker and duller red colours shown in this article are most probably a result of age. The newly printed colour was probably the brighter lighter red. The covers shown (some figures are reduced in size) illustrate the use of most of the labels and some varieties in the printing of some labels. Unlike the censors' hand-stamps, the labels were of a generally uniform design.

Rectangular red perforated Label

The first labels issued (figs. 1a & 1b) were for use in Istanbul and are known from May 1915 until about February 1916 with main usage early in the period. They were of a rectangular design with a white perforated border of a size similar to official pre-war post office sealing labels.

They came in two sizes. The earlier and more common size was 55×30 mm (printed area 48.5×26 mm). The later version, with slightly different vowel markings, was 50×28 mm (printed area 45×23mm). The text reads “İstanbul / sansürce kapatılmıştır” (İstanbul / item sealed by censor).

<sup>1</sup> Edited from an article first published in OPAL Journal, no. 243, 2021, pp. 21–41. Reprinted with the kind permission of the author.

Circular red Label with scalloped Edge without Star and Crescent

These were in use in four cities, Istanbul, Edirne, Izmir, and Baghdad over various time intervals (see figs. 4, 5, 6 & 7). They were all of a similar design with a diameter of 40 mm, but the words around the one used in Edirne differs from the words around the other three. The city's name was in the centre. The orientation of the place name was different for Istanbul. The pastry cutter shape with scalloped edge was used prior to the war for other purposes and was adopted to cut the labels from the printed sheet.

Circular Label with scalloped Edge with Star and thin Crescent

These labels (figs. 12, 13, and 15) were issued from Autumn 1915. The red Istanbul label (fig. 12) was issued first. Towards the end of 1915 the war appeared to be going in Turkey's direction with the withdrawal of the Allies from the Dardanelles and the Turkish advance through Sinai. The colour of the label was changed to green (fig. 13), the colour of Islam and the national colour of Egypt. However, the Turks were repulsed in Sinai and the colour of the seal was then changed to red, but with a thick crescent (see fig. 14). Note that the cutter used for the later Istanbul red labels had more scalloped segments. The very rare Manisa label appears to have been issued at the same time as the green Istanbul label. The outer ring of text and the star and crescent are identical to the Istanbul labels.

Circular Label with scalloped Edge with star and fat Crescent

Besides Istanbul, labels with a crescent and star were also produced for Izmir and Edirne. Two versions of the calligraphy for the Izmir labels exist. These labels are shown in figs. 20, 21 and 22. Observant readers will note that there is a white circular edge at the bottom of the label in fig. 20 indicating that the red printing was circular in shape on a white paper. Figs. 19 and 21 show the script of the labels misplaced from a central position indicating that the whole sheet was printed in red, not just the label parts.

Wax Seals

The commonest wax seals found on packets and registered envelopes are the personal seals of the censor clerk involved in sealing the packets and envelopes after inspection. However, there were some official seals. Surprisingly these are found both in Arabic and Latin alphabets.

Parliamentary Labels

Letters from the Parliament and Senate were censored by the Administration Officer prior to being put in the post. After applying the sealing label he used a dated parliamentary hand-stamp, in the latter part of the war being personalised for the Administrative Officer, Suleyman Bey. The two labels are shown in figs. 28 and 29. The senate label is particularly scarce.

The Meclis-i 'Umūmī

The Ottoman Parliament (General Assembly) or Meclis-i 'Umūmī (مجلس عمومی) was first instituted in 1876 but had already dissolved by the sultan in 1878. Revived in 1908 after the Young Turk revolution, it was superseded in 1920 by the Turkish Grand National Assembly in Ankara.

It consisted of the Chamber of Deputies or Hey'et-i Meb'ūsān (هیئت مبعوثان) a.k.a. Meclis-i Mebusān / Mebuslar Meclisi (مجلس مبعوثان) and the Senate or Hey'et-i A'yān (هیئت اعیان) a.k.a. Meclis-i Āyan (مجلس اعیان).

Ottoman Censorship Markings of WWI Part I: Negative Censorship Markings

by Hans Paul Soetens

Copyright © 2021

Whenever I browse through my collection of Ottoman censored covers, I miss an overview of the marking, labels, etc., used by the censorship offices. There are many articles in specialist journals, but nowhere is there a comprehensive overview in which all censorship markings are listed in alphabetical order of the censorship offices. Surely I am not the only one who lacks such an overview, perhaps other collectors of this area miss it as well.

Over the decades I have been able to add many letters to my collection and have also built up a stock of illustrations. I would like to present here the data known to me, with the hope that other collectors of this area will search their collections and help to expand this overview. My list is certainly not complete, but by cooperating with each other we can add a chapter to Ottoman postal history.

Notes on the Listings

Positive postmarks will be dealt with in a separate article.

Censorship marks of military field post offices are not included. These postmarks often contain information about the unit or office. As an example, I show here the postmark of the 'military school for officers liable for military service' (fig. 1).

Fig. 1:

"Military school for officers liable for military service /
1327."

Many of the images have been retouched and altered in respect of colour and contrast to show the inscriptions as best as possible. In some cases I have enlarged the images to facilitate the identification. This was especially necessary with older images or those from auction catalogues, as the technical quality was unsatisfactory; some images were hardly usable.

I ask collectors to send me their additions, corrections images (preferably with 600 dpi).

For the listing I have used Ottoman place names, thus: Aleppo → Haleb, Damas → Şam, Inoz → Enoz, Jerusalem → Kuds, Tschataldja → Çatalça, Tschorum → Çorum, Uzun-Keupru → Ouzoun-Keupru.

The Red Crescent Exhibition Constantinople 1917

by Jens Warnecke<sup>1</sup>

Copyright © 2020

A Red Crescent Exhibition (هلال احمر سرکسیسی) opened in Constantinople on 1st February 1917 (18 Kânûn-ı Sâni 1332). The exhibition was held at the Imperial Lyceum in Galata Sérail (Ghalata-sarāy) and lasted until 30th April 1917 (30 Nisan 1333).

There is a postmark specially made for the exhibition, listed by Bayındır (fig. 1, right).

The postmark was not only used on the official exhibition card, but also on all ‘normal’ items. The example below shows a 1916 postal card common for the time with the imprint showing Leander’s Tower.

A connection between the exhibition and the use of the Red Crescent obligatory tax stamps mentioned by Otto Graf<sup>2</sup> for March 1917 seems rather unlikely. Thus none of these stamps is present on this card.

Christoph Gärtner offered in his auction no. 37 a postal card of the Leander’s Tower series with the exhibition cancel but without the use of an obligatory tax stamp. The card shown (fig. 2) was written by Erich Grossmann-Hermann, delegate of the Saxon Red Cross and author of a report in book form of the exhibition entitled “Die Reise zur Roten-Halbmond-Ausstellung Konstantinopel 1917.”

Fig. 2: Special exhibition postmark on a postal card with the Leander’s Tower imprint.

I was recently able to acquire an antiquarian copy of the book. The text is divided into a travel and an exhibition report. The latter describes in detail the medical exhibits on display in the individual halls as well as the development of the Red Crescent since its renaming in 1877. However, there is no mention of a philatelic exhibition.

On the occasion of the exhibition, however, a commemorative card, among other memorabilia, was sold. My copy was postmarked at the exhibition on 12th March 1917 and despatched to Germany on 16th March 1917 with a regular postmark from Constantinople's main post office. Interestingly, however, even on this cover none of the Red Crescent stamps are affixed (figs. 3 and 3a).

Commemorative medals were also produced on the occasion of the Red Crescent exhibition (fig. 4). Künker's Autumn Auction 2017 catalogue describes lot number 7416 as follows:<sup>3</sup>

and further notes:

In 1917 a major exhibition of the Red Crescent was held in Constantinople, during which a four-tiered (gold, silver, bronze and zinc) medal was awarded, created by the Viennese medallist G. Herrmann.

Figs. 4 and 4a: Zinc medal of the 1917 Red Crescent Exhibition.

The exhibition was obviously non-philatelic in nature, but at least it produced a rather rare commemorative card and a special postmark. So at the very least, something like a special post office must have existed in one of the halls, though not mentioned in the exhibition report referred to above. How else could unfranked (!) exhibition cards have been collected and sent to the main post office in Stambul for franking and further cancelling? The postal card, on the other hand, was despatched solely with the special exhibition postmark. Both items also went through the Ottoman censorship.

The Earliest Ottoman Reply Coupon from Smyrna 1915

contributed by Hakan Berkil

Copyright © 2021

Used Ottoman IRCs are rare, especially from Aydin vilayet: one is known from Manissa, and only a few from the large commercial centre of Smyrna/İzmir. I can present here the earliest known copy:

Figs. 1–1b: Ottoman International Reply Coupon, type Rome Ro-4, purchased and postmarked in İzmir (Smyrna). Value: 1 piastre and 20 kuruş (i.e. 60 kuruş). Bilingual cancel “SMYRNE / 9” dated ۳۱۰۱۰۱۲ = 25.03.1915 (A/P 84, Bay 82),<sup>1</sup> a postmark used only between 1914 and 1918.

<sup>1</sup> Cf. Birken, 2019, vol. İzmir City, p. 21.

Editor's Notes

After Hakan told me about the rarity of Ottoman IRCs, I wondered why in such a large and important trading centre as Smyrna/Izmir so few coupons survived. One reason is of course that until 1914 every port city, even the smaller ones, was served by one, usually more, foreign post offices.

So most businesses did not use the Turkish post but rather the foreign posts to communicate with foreign countries. These were seen as faster and more reliable, and reportedly catered better to the needs of international businesses.

Specialist IRC collectors Wolfgang Leimenstoll and Hálfdan Helgason found a handful of Smyrna IRCs, all from during or after WWI (a selection is shown below). On the outbreak of WWI, all the foreign post offices were forced to close, so it's no wonder that from then on Turkish IRCs become more common, but are overall still scarce.

Hakan's copy is the earliest known from Smyrna with a beautiful strike of the canceller, and therefore deserves the status of a rarity.

Selling the Impossible Palestine 'Blues' 1918: 5 Mils Overprint in Grey Colour?

French auction house JFB (Jean-François Brun & Benoît Chandanson)<sup>1</sup> offered in its catalogue no. 3 (10th January 2021) this lot as part of a multi-part sale from Raphaël Livnat's collection:

Livnat's Article in The London Philatelist and a Facebook Discussion

This didn't register with me at first, only when my friend Rainer Fuchs FRPSL posted information on Facebook<sup>4</sup> about an article Livnat wrote for THE LONDON PHILATELIST<sup>5</sup> describing his 'find.' The

5 Livnat, Raphaël: 1918 EEF Palestine 5 milliemes: a new variety. In: The London Philatelist, no. 130, 2021 (May two-page article recounts the history of the “Blues” and is in the main inconsequential. However the last three paragraphs describe the block-of-four he put on sale:

The five millimmes overprint is always in black, moreover a dark black. In 1970 my eyes were attracted by a block of four where the overprint seemed much clearer than black (Figure 1). I had thought of a lack of inking, but when I looked at it with a powerful magnifying glass it was obvious that it was a grey ink (see Figure 3, right for comparison with the black overprint). The expert Jean François Brun confirmed that the ink is grey.

This sheet has 120 stamps. What has become of the other 116 stamps of the same sheet? Were there any that have survived over the course of a century? If you have any copies of this stamp, please check if there is a copy among them with a grey overprint. If you think you have an example, please inform the author of this article at livnat@hotmail.fr

Since the discovery of this block of four in 1970, several hundred copies have been examined, all of which have a black overprint of the same shade. This leaves the possibility that the grey variant could be thought of as an error in the choice of ink, or a test sheet whose grey shade was considered unsuitable. Perhaps this block of four will compete for rarity with the famous error of the ‘MILLILMES’?

During May 2021, a discussion ensued following Rainer’s Facebook posting about the block’s authenticity: the general tenor was doubt about this ‘find’. When enquiring with JFB about the offer, the auction house kindly supplied me with a 600 dpi scan of the piece (see fig. 1).

Of course only so much (i.e. so little) can be evaluated from just a scan. In the following I would like to set out various points, questions, and opinions by myself and fellow collectors expressed publicly or in e-mails to me. After consulting other philatelists, I came to a conclusion.

Some Critical Points for Reflection

1. Why keep quiet for 50 years? The find has never been publicised in any of the relevant journals. Why now?
2. Why has Livnat not presented his find to any expert on Palestine? He wants to sell the piece at 15.000 €. So the most obvious way would have been to ascertain a certificate by a recognised specialist expert.
3. Or has Livnat shown the piece to experts in the past and the result was negative?
4. Max Michel Mann wrote in the Facebook discussion: “In the time I have been collecting I have had conversations with David Dorfman, Jacques Kaufmann, Ze’ev Galibov, Yacov Tsachor. All people that are front runners in Palestine stamps. This stamp variety must have been discussed in Palestine Circles back then ... and most likely dismissed.”
5. Yacov Tsachor is an eminent trusted expert, member for many years of the International Association of Philatelic Experts (AIEP).<sup>6</sup> When I asked Tsachor for an opinion, this was his answer: “I do not think it is a variety. In the old printings Black could easily turn to ‘light’ Black, Grey-Black and Grey. I am surprised JFB and the London Philatelist give him the full stage. I expect that such a ‘discovery’ be accompanied with at least one certificate from a recognized expert in this field.”<sup>7</sup>
6. Why, if there was a sheet of 120 stamps in this ‘trial colour,’ such a variant has never appeared in literature on the “Blues”? Generations of philatelist have meticulously researched this issue in the last 100 years. Nothing.
7. One expert who researched the printing process of the “Blues” and published several articles

7 E-mails by Yacov Tsachor to the author, 15.05.2021 and 7.08.2021.

- on the matter, Paulo Renato Risi, wrote: "Ink 'problems' (or varieties) may be caused by so many reasons during the printing process. Viscosity, pressure of the rollers, drying conditions, cleaning of the plates, ink poorly grounded to the surface (too short or too soft), non-uniformity of the paper production, mechanics of the press, etc. There are many causes! Also we can't forget the ink may change along the years because of many other reasons, like sun exposure for example. [...] So regarding the article with the 'grey' overprint specifically, I am more inclined to disconsider it. I believe it is not grey, and in this case, the price asked is totally unreal. To dispel any doubts, the paper and the ink pigments from both copies (original black and 'grey') should be analysed by a physical chemistry laboratory."<sup>8</sup>
8. Livnat writes in the LP piece: "The expert Jean François Brun confirmed that the ink is grey." Benoît Chandanson of JFB told me: "Our point of view is that the overprint is genuine, of course (and the stamp too), and really grey, not black. But: our responsibility in this case is limited to that. [...] Many explanations are possible with an overprint variety, and in this case, we don't know anything about the printing process (essay, waste or error). And it's for this that we can not issue a certificate."<sup>9</sup> Jean François Brun is a longtime member of AIEP and former president of the Académie de Philatélie.<sup>10</sup>
  9. The item was first offered in a French auction at 15.000 €, part of several sales of Livnat's collections, largely Israel material. The lot remained unsold. From what I am told Livnat intends to offer it in a UK auction next, at an even higher price. In these circumstances, does one have wonder why all of a sudden there appears an article in an eminent UK journal promoting his 'find'?
  10. THE LONDON PHILATELIST is of course the trusted journal of The Royal Philatelic Society of London (RPSL). As one commentator said: "They wouldn't publish rubbish." But one is allowed to ask what checks they made before publication, if any. From some comments I received during this research, it seems to me that Livnat benefits from a good reputation amongst philatelists.
  11. Regarding his philatelic reputation, I feel urged to mention here that Livnat left (at his own volition) the Cercle Français Philatélique d'Israël (CFPI) and was expelled by the Académie de Philatélie several years ago.<sup>11</sup>

Conclusions

All circumstances, arguments, and questions set out above point to only one conclusion: Unless the block-of-four is expertised and certified by a recognised expert in the field, its authenticity must be regarded as unproven.

Maybe Livnat is just like so many of us philatelists: he just wanted to believe what he saw...

Introduction of the French Trans-Desert Motor Service Damascus–Baghdad in Competition to the British Overland Mail Haifa–Baghdad

by Rainer Fuchs (AIJP, FRPSL)

Copyright © 2021

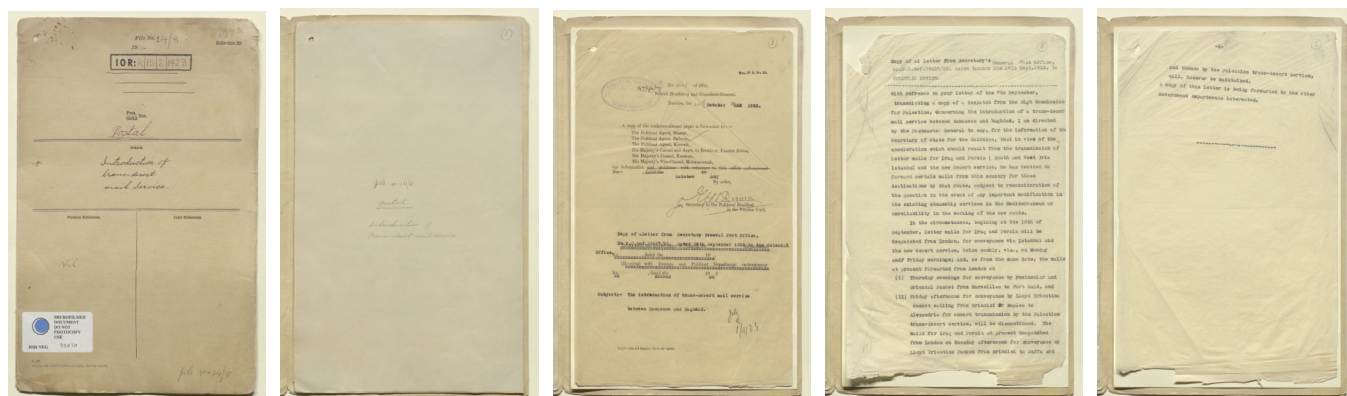

Despite the Overland Mail Baghdad-Haifa 1923–1948 being a relatively modern area which celebrates the centenary of its inauguration in a few years' time, much is still unknown, or better said: still to be discovered.

As commonly known, at some point of time, due to political circumstances and rivalry between the British dominated Palestine and Iraq and the French dominated areas (Syria and Lebanon), an alternative mail transport route, commonly known as the "Service Transdésertique" was established, which operated in competition to the Overland Mail Baghdad–Haifa.

I was fortunate to discover a scanned copy of a 1933 letter in the Qatar Digital Library (QDL) which clarifies – at least partly – the introduction of this route.

Summary

The file<sup>1</sup> contains the copy of a letter from the Secretary, General Post Office, London, dated 16th September 1933, P.O. Ref. 39537/33, to the Colonial Office, London. Subject: "The introduction of trans-desert mail service between Damascus and Baghdad."

It can safely be assumed that, despite the definite day when that service started is not yet documented, the trans-desert service started on or a few days earlier than 16th September 1933 and that the service in the other direction (Baghdad to Damascus) also started on the same date.

It is however not yet clear how mail directed westwards (i.e. from Baghdad to Syria, Europe and beyond) were chosen by the Iraqi Post Office for the service carrying the letters through the Syro-Iraqi desert. Mail from Iran was eventually delivered in closed bags to Baghdad Main Sorting Office and was marked accordingly, but what happened to mail originating in Iraq and sorted in Baghdad? Was the British service through Palestine, for political reasons, the preferred one? Did the Iraqi Post Office entertain mail transport contracts with both the French and the British service, or at any point in time exclusively with one or the other company?

Some Interesting Proofs and Essays of (Trans)Jordan

by Avo Kaplanian

A while ago Folkert Bruining, chairman of Al-Barid Philatelic Club<sup>1</sup> and a regular contributor to the MEPB, drew my attention to four essays of Emir, later King, Abdullah of Jordan. These essays (fig. 1) were part of a foolscap<sup>2</sup> sheet of 50 essays of different British Commonwealth countries prepared in 1926 by the British printing house Bradbury Wilkinson & Co. Ltd. This page was part of the printing house's archive and is dated 25th June 1926. Above each of the four Transjordan essays we see a manuscript date of "31/12/26".

Up until now these essays were unknown to me and were never mentioned in the special chapter on proofs and essays of Abed H. Najjar's book "The Stamps of Jordan 1920–1965". Furthermore, neither R.T. Ledger nor K.C.R. Souan mention such essays in their books on the philately of Jordan.

Fig. 1: Four essays of Emir, later King Abdullah of Jordan, dated of "31/12/26", part of a foolscap sheet of 50 essays for different British possessions by Bradbury Wilkinson & Co.

In my own archive, I found a copy of a similar essay of Emir Abdullah which was offered for sale by Stanley Gibbons Ltd. (fig. 2) and was described as follows:

1927, Emir Abdullah, New Currency, Perkins, Bacon & Co. Frame designed by Yacoub Sukkar with seven pointed star top centre. 5m. Sunken photographic proof in sepia on thick card, with colour trial in bright blue on white paper attached. Also the photograph (re-touched) used for the main design.

Here also we see the seven pointed star above the Emir's head, i.e. the same star as that in the first two Bradbury Wilkinson essays. This star was considered as being too easily mis-interpreted and could be seen as the six pointed star of David. The later accepted versions rejected this star in the design. Both these essays in figs. 1 and 2 were not adopted and were never issued.

<sup>2</sup> Standard foolscap measures 343×432 mm; very roughly equivalent to standard paper size C3 (324×458 mm).

Proofs of Jordan in My Collection

The above two proof essays were not part of my collection, but the next 18 essays are part of my collection and I would like to share them with my fellow collectors hereafter.

I shall start with an imperforate proof, also unadopted, in blue colour on thin gummed paper showing the left stamp with a large figure “5” and the right hand one with a smaller figure “5”. Here we also see the seven pointed star above Emir Abdullah’s head (fig. 3).

The next three proofs (figs. 4, 5 and 6) are similar to the previous one but they show the figure ‘5’ and the bilingual: Transjordan in a reversed form. Fig. 4 shows the proof in a vertical pair with wide margin on the left in sepia colour on ungummed thick carton paper, while in fig. 5 we see a block of four with a wide right margin of the same stamp but in blue and on thin gummed paper. Fig. 6 shows again a proof of the same stamp in blue with wide left margin but this time it is on thin brown ungummed paper. All three proof essays were prepared in November 1927.

In fig. 7 we see two slightly different unadopted photographic essays (A & B) of Emir Abdullah in sepia dated by hand “11/1/27” and mounted on thick carton cards. Both essays carry the word “Duplicate” on the left lower corner. The right-hand one is a little bigger in size than the left-hand one.

Figs. 4–6:

Three similar proofs from 1927,
all are mirrored.

Fig. 8 shows a final approved die proof essay of top value (1000 mils = 1 pound) of the definitive set of 13 stamps of Emir Abdullah in grey-black on a wide-lined thin ungummed sheetlet with sunken borders and is endorsed in ink and initials with "App. 26/4/29". This proof essay was prepared by Perkins, Bacon & Co.

Fig. 9 (next page) shows a proof of the overprint only, in black on white wove paper of the 1930 Locust Campaign twelve stamps set in a complete sheet of 100 (10×10). This overprint sheet, believed to be unique, was used only for the slightly bigger size 500 mils value stamp. On position 43 of the sheet we see the stamp with the error of the omitted "C" and broken "U" in the word "LOCUST". The actual size of the sheet is 243×297 mm.

In fig. 10 we see the very attractive imperforate proofs of the Perkins, Bacon & Co. complete 'Tourist' pictorial set of 1933. The whole set is perforated "SPECIMEN" in horse-shoe type.

Fig. 11 shows an unissued 1955 photographic essay of 20 fils prepared by Harrison & Sons Ltd. for the occasion of the wedding of King Hussein and Princess Dina. The size of the essay is 32×25 mm and it is stuck on a golden colour larger background (50×44 mm). The whole page is part of a six-page special red leather-bound presentation booklet produced by Harrison & Sons Ltd.

 The actual size of the sheet is 243×297 mm, here reduced to ca. 75%.

The size of the essay is 32×25 mm, it is affixed to a golden background measuring 50×44 mm.

The whole page is part of a six-page special red leather-bound presentation booklet.

In figs. 12 and 13 we see the imperforate colour proofs of the issued complete set of 6 of the 1956 first Arab Postal Congress in Amman. The proofs are of the imperforate stamps mounted on six presentation cards measuring 101×122 mm and were prepared by Thomas De La Rue & Co. Ltd.

Another essay of the year 1956 is shown in fig. 14. Here we see an essay of a partly hand painted red on black of a 12 fils stamp supposedly to be issued to commemorate the birth of an (unnamed) prince: "BIRTH OF H.R.H. / FEBRUARY 1956". This design, denoted as "A", was not adopted and is mounted on a special black, white and grey card. Under the proposed stamp we see that this essay was designed by Bradbury Wilkinson & Co. Ltd.

Fig. 15 depicts a proof of the background design of the 1958 set of four stamps commemorating the 10th anniversary of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights. The proof is without inscription or denomination. The issued stamp is seen next to the proof to compare the end result of this proof.

In fig. 16 we see four essay die proofs of the unissued stamps commemorating the Arab Union. These proofs were prepared by Bradbury Wilkinson & Co. Ltd. in 1958. They all have the same size, viz. 70×54 mm, in colours green, blue, brown and violet, and are dated 14th February 1958. The design shows portraits of King Hussein of Jordan and King Faisal II of Iraq. The proposed stamps were never issued due to the assassination of King Faisal II on 14th July 1958. The stamps were meant to be a joint issue to be released at the same time by both Jordan and Iraq. That's why the upper three essays in fig. 16 carry the inscription "Jordan Postage" while the fourth and last one shows "Iraq Postage".

The next two illustrations shown in figs. 17 and 18 are of the imperforate colour proofs on two pages in the issued colours of the 1959 King Hussein definitive set of 16 stamps, all mounted on a four-page Thomas De La Rue & Co. Ltd. presentation folder with each stamp being numbered in blue or black.

Proofs of the West Bank in my Collection

Now I move to the West Bank which fell under Jordanian administration in the period between 1948 and 1967. The first item here is shown in fig. 19. Here we see two essays of the highest two values (500 mils and 1 dinar) of the definitive King Abdullah set of 16 stamps of December 1948 with the bilingual “PALESTINE” overprint. The imperforate proofs are stuck on two 104×119 mm dark green thick carton cards with a diagonal “SPECIMEN” hand-stamp in red on each stamp. Both cards are initialled on the left lower corner and they were prepared by Perkins, Bacon & Co.

Finally in fig. 20 we see eleven Postage Due stamps overprinted “PALESTINE” in Arabic and English and having the denominations of 2 mils (8 stamps) and 10 mils (3 stamps). All these stamps of December 1948 are imperforate proofs with wide margins and they have the black “PALESTINE” overprint in many different varieties: inverted, double, double and slanted, double diagonal, double inverted, misplaced, triple and quadruple overprints. These were all trial proofs of the overprint. Or might I ask: do these fall under the heading ‘printing waste’?

Fig. 20–20j: Eleven Postage Due stamps overprinted “PALESTINE” in Arabic and English, 2 m and 8 m. Imperforate proofs with wide margins, December 1948.

The black “PALESTINE” overprint presents itself in many different varieties: inverted, double, double and slanted, double diagonal, double inverted, misplaced, triple and quadruple overprints.

Appeal

At the end of this article, I would like to add the following appeal to my fellow collectors: As I believe that next to the proofs and essays presented here a relatively big amount of others exist: So all additions, corrections and comments will be greatly appreciated.

Figs. 19 and 19a:

Two essays of the highest two values, 500 mils and 1 dinar, of the King Abdullah definitive set of December 1948 with the bilingual "PALESTINE" overprint,

Slogan Marks of the World Refugee Year

by Lawrence Fisher and Dr. Ofir Winter<sup>1</sup>

Copyright © 2021

In 1958, there were millions of refugees who still had not been resettled and were handled mainly by two organizations, UNHCR and UNRWA.

Based on an idea initiated by the United Kingdom, the United Nations decided on a World Refugee Year (WRY). UN General Assembly Resolution 1285 of 5th December 1958, which was set to begin in June of 1959, for refugees all over the world. The World Refugee Year was officially launched on 28th June 1959. The basic idea of World Refugee Year was that a special, purely humanitarian effort should be made to bring refugee problems nearer to a solution. The emblem of the WRY was an uprooted oak tree. It depicted the refugees being uprooted from their own home (see fig. 1).

For the official United Nations stamps, Olav Mathiesen from Denmark designed a special emblem. It depicted a tall standing silhouette between protective hands and subsequently became the official UNHCR logo (fig. 2).<sup>2</sup>

Fig. 2: Proof of the official U.N. stamp, dated 2.09.1959.

United Nation General Assembly
Resolution 1285 (XIII)<sup>3</sup>

782nd plenary meeting, 5 December 1958

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees,<sup>4</sup> together with the resolution adopted by the Executive Committee of the United Nations Refugee Fund at its ninth (special) session on 26 September 1958,<sup>5</sup>

Convinced of the need to make a further world-wide effort to help resolve the world refugee problem,

Having considered the proposal for a World Refugee Year to begin in June 1959,

Noting that this proposal has two aims, namely:

(a) To focus interest on the refugee problem and to encourage additional financial contributions from Governments, voluntary agencies and the general public for its solution,

(b) To encourage additional opportunities for permanent refugee solutions, through voluntary repatriation, resettlement or integration, on a purely humanitarian basis and in accordance with the freely expressed wishes of the refugees themselves,

1. Urges States Members of the United Nations and members of the specialized agencies to co-operate, in accordance with the national wishes and needs of each country and from a humanitarian point of view, in promoting a World Refugee Year as a practical means of securing increased assistance for refugees throughout the world;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to take such steps as he may think fit to assist in the promotion of a World Refugee Year in accordance with the present resolution.

United Nation General Assembly
Resolution 1502 (XV)<sup>7</sup>

935th plenary meeting, 5 December 1960

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 1285 (XIII) of 5 December 1958 and 1390 (XIV) of 20 November 1959 on the World Refugee Year,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the World Refugee Year,<sup>8</sup>

Noting with gratification the remarkable success of the World Refugee Year in many parts of the world, not only financially but also in promoting solutions of problems relating to large numbers of refugees, particularly those who are handicapped,

Noting further that the World Refugee Year has focused the attention of world opinion on the problems of refugees,

Believing that the enthusiasm and interest aroused by the World Refugee Year can, if maintained, make a vital contribution to this end,

1. Expresses its thanks to all Governments, national committees, non-governmental organizations and private individuals who have contributed to the success of the World Refugee Year, as well as to the Secretary-General and his Special Representative for the World Refugee Year, for their efforts in this regard;

2. Requests States Members of the United Nations and members of the specialized agencies, as well as international non-governmental organizations, to continue their efforts to assist refugees on a purely humanitarian basis, especially by:

(a) Increased co-operation with the programmes of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East;

(b) Efforts to maintain the public interest aroused by the World Refugee Year in the solution of refugee problems;

(c) The encouragement of additional opportunities for permanent refugee solutions through voluntary repatriation, resettlement or integration in accordance with the freely expressed wishes of the refugees themselves;

(d) The further encouragement of financial contributions for international assistance to refugees including contributions from non-governmental organizations and the general public;

3. Expresses the hope that all people everywhere will take into consideration the problems of refugees and the need for sustained and increased efforts for their ultimate solution.

As a part of World Refugee Year some Arab nations issued stamps to turn the problem to the subject of Palestinian refugees, many of them using the same design. Their omnibus issue depicted the UNHCR insignia in the top left, a woman and a child in tatty clothing, next to a tent, pointing to a map, clearly marked Palestine, as in the Palestine mandate territory (fig. 3).

This design was used on stamps by Egypt (UAR), including a version for Gaza with the same motif, Syria and Yemen. Both Egypt and Syria used UAR, i.e. United Arab Republic, as the country name. United Arab Republic was a union between Egypt and Syria as a part of Gamal Abdel Nasser's attempt at pan Arabism. It began in 1958 and existed until 1961. The UAR was a member of the United Arab States, a loose confederation with the Mutawakkilite Kingdom of Yemen, which also was dissolved in 1961. This would explain why Yemen issued a pair of stamps with the exact same design. Saudi Arabia issued a set of three stamps, but their motif was different. It showed the use of the actual WRY emblem plus the map of Israel as it was in 1960 (fig. 5).

Slogan Marks and Cancellations

However as we all know, when dealing with stamps, it is a simple issue of looking in a catalogue, as stamps issued by valid stamp issuing countries, according to the Universal Postal Union, UPU, are well documented. However there is little documentation on the use of slogan cancels on mail. Various slogans were issued as a part of the World Refugee year, only a few are documented.

Fig.6: Letter from Sudan, 1960, featuring the slogan hand-stamp "Remember the million Palestine refugees evicted from their homes on May 15 1948".

The figure above (fig. 6) displays a letter from Sudan in 1960 with a bilingual slogan (Arabic and English) “Remember the million Palestine refugees evicted from their homes on May 15 1948”. Here we see the claim that the number of refugees was a million. In essence it is unknown how many Arab refugees fled as there are many differing accounts, from a low of 200,000 as initially stated by Syria, through 300,000 as broadcast by Iraq or 472,000 as reported by Ralph Bunche to the UN in 1948.

The same slogan was used on mail from Iraq. In almost 40 years of collecting, less than 10 covers from Iraq have been seen by the authors of this article (fig. 7).

Fig. 7: An Iraqi cover with a similar hand-stamp
 “Remember the million Palestine refugees evicted from their homes on May 15, 1948”.
 The Egyptian meter applied on arrival at Cairo Airport reads:
 “Arab nationalism: a message of peace and culture”.

Jordan issued a similar slogan, only in English, with “Remember the million Palestine refugees expelled from their homes on May 15, 1948”. There was a change in wording from “evicted” to “expelled” (fig. 8). Again, in almost 40 years of collecting, less than 10 have been seen by the authors of this article. Was the change of wording intentional? Expelled has a harsher connotation than evicted; one cannot return when expelled, but eviction implies that they will be able to return.

According to the Al-Barīd,<sup>9</sup> the Jordanian slogan also exists in Arabic. The same magazine speaks of a slogan in which the word “expelled” was changed to “denied.” In 40 years of collecting, an example has not reached the market.

Recently another slogan has been seen from Jordan, “Remember the million Palestine refugees aviated from their homes on May 1948” (fig. 9). To the best of our knowledge, this is undocumented, to date. Why the use of the word “aviated”? Aviate implies to fly or to pilot an airplane. Was this intentional or an incorrect translation?

Lebanon also issued a bilingual slogan, in French and Arabic, “Remember the million Palestine refugees expelled from their homes on 15th May 1948”. Strangely, to this date, this is the only copy seen!

Egypt also issued slogans for the World Refugee Year. They issued a slogan, in English, inscribed: “Remember Homeless Million Arab Refugees”, no mention of Palestinians. This was used on both incoming mail, as seen on the letter from Lebanon (fig. 11, note the “A” in the Cairo Airport cancel, presumably for arrival) and on outgoing mail (fig. 12, note the “T” in the Port Said, presumably for transmission). Once again very few of these slogans have surfaced.

Figs. 11 and 11a: A Lebanese cover with the meter mark slogan "Remember homeless million Arab refugees" struck on arrival at Cairo Airport.

A slogan, only in Arabic, was also issued: "The Anniversary of the Displacement of One Million Palestinians / 15 May 1948" (fig. 13). Why the specific mention of Palestinian refugees only in the Arabic slogan?

These Egyptian slogans were both reissued in 1965. According to the Egyptian Post Magazine, they were reissued on outgoing mail in honour of the "Anniversary of the theft of Palestinian Land". The slogan in English was to be used on mail from Cairo Airport as of 17th May 1965 and the Arabic slogan was to be used on mail from Cairo and Alexandria from 8th May 1965. The authors have only seen the Arabic slogan for 1965.

In addition to the Lebanese slogan, Syria issued the same slogan, but to date only a single copy has come to market. Sources in Lebanon say that it was probably only in use only in the middle of May of 1960 for the Nakba, although they did not refer to a Nakba in 1960.

Conclusion

This article deals solely with the events surrounding the World Refugee Year. After this event the Arab countries used stamps to show their solidarity with the refugee issue. The use of stamps as a propaganda tool is not new and numerous articles have been written about this. Slogan cancels are relatively undocumented. It is very strange that so few slogans have surfaced, presumably because some were in Arabic but it does offer an opportunity to add spice to a collection.

This is a very rare cover from Mandate Palestine to Iceland: Registered letter dispatched on 13th January 1947 from Rishon Le Tsiona (Rishon Le Tsiyon) to Húsavík, Iceland.

Franking: 2m + 13m + 20m = 35m. This is the correct postage fee for a registered cover. Date-stamp "RISHON LE TSIYON": Dorfman type D8 (31.03.1937–2.04.1948), Sacher type 7 (18.12.1936–14.05.1948). Registration label "RISHON LE TSIYON" (Sacher type 7, no date range stated).

Dispatch route: Overland by ship Haifa to Brindisi, by train from Brindisi (Italy) to Rostock (Germany), then by ship to Gedser (Denmark), by train to Copenhagen, then by ship to Reykjavík (Iceland). Finally by Icelandic supply ship to its final destination, Húsavík, a village on the north coast of the island. On the reverse: Húsavík arrival mark 10.02.1947. Dispatch time: 29 days.

The addressee is Friðrik Hákon Örn Friðriksson (1927–2016) who lived in Húsavík until 1954. He is known for his photographs of the area and later became pastor in Mývetningar and Þingeyingar.<sup>1</sup>

Jordan's Postcard for King Hussein's Fiftieth Birthday 1985

by Dr. David K. Smith

Copyright © 2021

In two earlier articles, Avo Kaplanian has drawn attention to the limited number of postal stationery cards issued by the postal service in Jordan.<sup>1</sup> A further postcard was issued in 1985 to mark the 50th birthday of the late King Hussein, as illustrated in figs. 2 to 2d. In the same way as the later 'touristic postcards' this was prepaid by airmail to any destination in the world, but did not carry any imprinted pictorial stamp design.

The design of the card (148×115mm) matches the design of the 200 Fils block (miniature sheet) issued on 14th November 1985 for the king's birthday (SG MS1478, MiNr. Bl. 51), which was the occasion for national celebration. The postal card was issued with little advance publicity as a "boon to the people of Jordan" and available free of charge at post offices; though I do not know if every post office had stocks. The imprinted postage paid marking has minimal detail, alongside a pentagonal design widely used during the national celebrations. My used copy of the card reached the U.K. successfully (fig. 1)

I am grateful to Avo Kaplanian for an exchange of correspondence about this card.

Market Report: Supplies of Post Office Postal Stationery Wrappers of Middle East Countries 2011–2020

by Dr. John K. Courtis (FRPSL)

Copyright © 2021

There are eight Middle Eastern countries and postal entities that issued Post Office postal stationery wrappers. Because of low survival rates it is of interest to know whether the supply of used wrappers coming onto the market has been stable or declining.

Some awareness of what has happened in the last decade will allow country collectors and postal stationery collectors to assess the likelihood and time involved in being able to complete their collections. Also, there is a relationship between scarce supply and higher prices so there might be a financial impact.

The figures in table 1 are based on daily listings of used wrappers on the internet site eBay. These have been hand-collected by the author over the past decade. They represent different used wrappers; duplicates have been removed.

Although eBay is not the only auction site or source of wrappers available to the philatelic market, it is large, growing, objective, and transparent, with many buyers and many sellers. It is available to anyone worldwide who is connected to the internet. It has 182 million active buyers and more than US-$ 10 billion in revenue in 2020.

The total supply of wrappers for the eight countries was 1,282. Two countries dominate the supply: Egypt with 690 (being 54%) and German Post Offices in the Levant with 423 or 33%. The other six countries account for the remaining 13% of the total. These countries and postal entities are examined for uncommon types and scarcity.

Egypt

A collector of Egypt will experience difficulty in obtaining more than half of these issues. The supply is dominated by the 1889 first issues of 1m brown and 2m green sphinx and pyramids. These two issues account for about 90% of the available used copies.

In 1914, the indicia were changed to Gyassas sailboats on the Nile for the 1m brown and Cleopatra on the 2m green. These two types are listed regularly and the collector should be able to acquire these with patience.

In 1931, there was a colour change for these two indicia: 1m from brown to orange and 2m from green to black. Only four copies of the orange and a single copy of the black have been recorded in my database and these types are difficult to find.

In 1932, two types depicting King Faud were issued, 1m orange and 2m black. While the 1m appears more frequently, the 2m black, and the 4m green issued in 1937 to meet higher postal rates, appear with single issues only. They are scarce and collectors will need to consider mint copies as an interim measure.

In 1939, the first of three wrappers depicting King Farouk was issued, a 1m orange brown. In 1941, the 4m green was issued and in 1947, the 2m red orange 'Marshal' design of King Farouk was issued. The supply of these is small with six copies of the 1m, a single copy of the 4m, and two copies of the red orange 2m. Unused copies will necessarily have to suffice unless non-eBay sources are known to supply these later issue wrappers.

Figs. 1 and 2: Egypt 1937 4m King Faud and 1941 4m King Farouk

German Post Offices in Levant

There were six Post Office types issued between 1900 and 1908 for German Post Offices in the Levant. Except for the 1908 issue all are overprinted "10 PARA 10"; the location of the overprint and the bars over the "A"s of "PARA" helping to differentiate the different types. Only the first issue is a different design, being a numeral. All other types depict the 'Germania' design. Excellent illustrations of overprinting and watermarking can be found in Kośniowski's catalogue.<sup>1</sup>

The difficulty faced by a collector when using eBay images is that the watermarked variety cannot be detected. The supply of these wrappers tends to be dominated by the 1901 issue, clearly detectable by the Jerusalem postmark 1902. The 1904 issue with flat bars over "A" can be detected as can the 1905 with overprint positioned in the centre of the indicium.

The overprint on the 1908 issue appears on a diagonal reading upwards. Only the 1908 issue is difficult to detect because of the presence of the watermark. The supply of all of these types is regular and the collector will have little difficulty in obtaining a copy of each type, given the caveat of the watermarked issue.

Figs. 3 and 4: German Post Offices in the Levant 1904 'Reichspost' (bars above A) and 1905 'Deutsches Reich'.

Great Britain Post Offices in the Levant

There were three issues of Post Office types of Great Britain indicia overprinted "LEVANT". They infrequently come onto the market and only 14 listings were recorded for the decade ending 2020.

The first issue in 1905 was the De La Rue printing of the 1902 GB yellow green ½d indicium of King Edward VII overprinted. The is the most 'common' of the extant quantities. The second issue is the 1911 issue of the McCorquodale printing of this indicium, and the third issue is the 1912 GB King George V indicium overprinted. These second and third issues are elusive wrappers with only two copies of each in the database. Considerable patience will be needed to acquire them from eBay.

Figs. 5 and 6: GB Post Offices in Levant: 1905 King Edward VII, 1912 King George V.

Mandate Palestine

There were two Post Office issues of Palestine. In 1931 there was a 2m blue green depicting Rachel's tomb with headings in English, Arabic and Hebrew. This wrapper was intended for inland use although there is one in the database addressed to East Sussex, England without uprating.

The other wrapper is a 3m yellow green with heading in English and French. Both wrappers were printed by Harrison & Sons Ltd. The supply of both of these is constant but limited with low annual amounts being listed. Nevertheless, a collector should have no difficulty in obtaining each of these types.

Persia

This is a difficult country to collect if used copies are required. There have been numerous listings of mint copies which may be a realistic, and perhaps the only, alternative. In the past decade, only ten copies of these wrappers have been listed, an average annual rate of one.

Persia issued 25 Post Office types if wrappers hand-stamped with control marks are included. Only two of these from 1902 onward have values for used copies in the Kośniowski catalogue. Even mint copies of the 1902 and 1904 control mark issues have high catalogue values.

The first issue in 1885 is mired in controversy and as a consequence was never officially issued for postal use, although there is a copy in the database that warrants expertising. The second issue in 1888 is also of concern because the overprint was forged. Mint copies are to be found of both the original and forged overprint.

In 1893, the first issue of the Coat of Arms with Persian Lion and Sun appeared, a 1ch lilac. This was followed in 1897 with three issues depicting the same design: 2ch brown, 3ch violet and 6ch orange. It is these four Post Office types that can be found, but with patience; they appear regularly but in small quantities. The 3ch is the most 'common' of these with 15 copies listed since 2003. The 1ch has three copies, the 2ch 5 copies and the 6ch 1 copy. Perhaps these wrappers are more readily available from non-eBay sources. The 1899 issue of the 3ch with arabesque control mark has made an appearance five times. The wrappers of Persia in used condition are some of the most elusive wrappers to challenge the collector.

Figs. 11 and 12: Persia 1897, 6ch orange, and 1899 3ch violet with arabesque control mark in violet.

Sudan

One could be forgiven for thinking every collector would like to acquire a copy of the desert postman on camel indicium on a wrapper. It is a gem in design and captures the romance of the time. Sudan issued six Post Office types, the first three of which, in 1898, were the sphinx and pyramid indicia of Egypt overprinted in Arabic and "SOUDAN" in English. There has been a steady but muted supply of these during the past decade, and a collector should be able to obtain a used copy of each. Less than ten copies of each have appeared since 2003.

The larger postman on camel indicium issued in 1898 comprised a 1m brown and a 2m green and both have appeared regularly with 14 copies of the 1m and 18 copies of the 2m since 2003. Only the smaller 1921 issue of the same design in 2m orange brown is scarce. Only a single copy has appeared since 2003 and is a difficult wrapper to find.

Figs. 13 and 14: Sudan 1908, 1m brown, and 1921 2m orange brown 'Desert Postman on Camel'.

Syria

In the past decade only two Post Office types have been issued. In 1920, two indicia of Turkey were overprinted with symbol and value in Arabic: the 1m on 2p violet and the 4m on 10p green. Kośniowski notes there have not been any genuine used copies recorded. The database has no copy of the 1m, but three copies of the 4m, two of which are shown in figs. 13 and 14 for inspection of alleged non-genuine usage.

Figs. 15 and 16: Syria 1920, overprinted Turkey 4m on 10p green, genuine usage questioned.

Ottoman Empire (Turkey)

There were eight Post Office issues of Turkey. In 1901, a set of four were issued showing a small Tughra design printed on thin oily paper. They were printed locally by the Public Debt Department of the Ministry of Finance.

During the past decade the supply of wrappers of Turkey was 72, with an annual average of about seven and a range of two to 15. The supply has been regular, but it is mostly the last issues in 1914 that are available. The earlier issues do exist in small quantities and the patient collector should be able to obtain a used example of each of the 5pa violet, 10pa green, both intended for inland mail, and a 5pa yellow brown and 10pa yellow green intended for foreign mail.

The 1902 issue of the 20pa carmine and the 1p blue are shrouded in mystery. They were not needed because there was no increase in postal rates and it is possible they were issued in error. There are five copies of the 20pa and four copies of the 1p and these are shown in fig. 16. The 1914 issues are larger and circular, a 2pa brown and a 10pa green. These should pose little difficulty in acquisition.

Figs. 17 and 18: Turkey 1902, 20pa carmine, 1p blue.

Summary

Post Office postal stationery wrappers of Middle East countries and postal entities examined here show a mixed response in terms of supply coming onto the market in the decade ending 2020. While eBay is not the only philatelic source of wrappers, it serves to identify wrappers that can be acquired from this source as used copies, and those that are best acquired as unused copies, at least temporarily.

Only German Post Offices in the Levant and Mandate Palestine are relatively easy to collect with all types having appeared on eBay (assuming the watermarked Levant variety appeared). Egypt has experienced a big supply over the decade, but later issues are difficult to find, a story that can be told for many other worldwide entities. This slowdown in supply is easy to understand when the demand for wrappers decreased as alternative media enables speedier transmission of news and other printed matter.

For Syria, and the Persia issues with control marks, eBay is not a reliable source for acquiring these wrappers. Sudan's final issue is scarce. Issues of Great Britain Post Offices in the Levant are also elusive. Turkey's 1902 issues with higher denominations are difficult to find, possibly because their issue was a mistake.

Taken overall, the region offers some interesting challenges for the collector. There would need to be compromises, some wrappers can be acquired used, but some would need to be acquired in unused condition because there are degrees of doubt as to whether they were actually used commercially.

Enquiries: Mahmoud Ramadan, m.ramadan@medmark.eg<sup>1</sup>

When in 1798 French troops under General Napoléon Bonaparte invaded Egypt and Syria, a postal service was instituted, at first it was to just serve the occupation forces, but was later opened to civilian mails, targetting the community of local and foreign traders in (mainly) Lower Egypt. This attempt failed and after the French troops were defeated, these provinces of the Ottoman Empire fell back to the traditional ways of conveying messages: Government institutions relied on official messengers exchanging mails between Egypt's two political and commercial centres, Cairo and Alexandria, as well as provincial capitals, whereas traders used their own private messenger services, largely on an ad hoc basis.

Some time after 1820 the government scheme was put on a better organised basis: regular services were introduced, ranging from daily despatches between Cairo and Alexandria, with other towns serviced once or more a week, and farther destinations, like Sudan, once a month. Commerce still used their own services and those of forwarding agents for connections to other countries. This Government scheme opened itself also to commercial and private mails within Egypt. The operation of Carlo Meratti became widely used. This is usually referred to as the Vice-Royal Postal Service in contemporaneous reports and documents, and is now better known as the Mohamed Aly Post (MAP). This service is the object of Ramadan's study.

Initially Ramadan discusses the knowledge about the MAP through articles published, tracing hints by Georges Khayat (1932) and Jacques Tagher (1951).<sup>2</sup> The latter had access to state archives and his information forms the basis of most of what is known about MAP. The Vice-Royal Post is said to have been instituted in the early 1820s,<sup>3</sup> but the first documentary evidence stems from the appointment of Ali el-Damahouri as head of the service in 1825. He was the brother of Hassan el-Badehi, who, with Omar Hamid, operated the government scheme under contract:<sup>4</sup>

While private and commercial mail was carried by this service, no postal markings were used, and thus it becomes quite difficult to distinguish such correspondence from others that were possibly delivered by other means or even hand-delivered, unless there are manuscript indications on the outside or within the text that explain the method of transport.

<sup>1</sup> The book was provided to me free-of-charge as I am a member of the Egypt Study Circle.

Ramadan then discusses letters from the era to discern their official nature (based on the sender and addressee details) and any hints of the operation of MAP. Apparently no covers are known prior to 1834, and none after 1856: listed are 19 letters, of which three examples are illustrated.

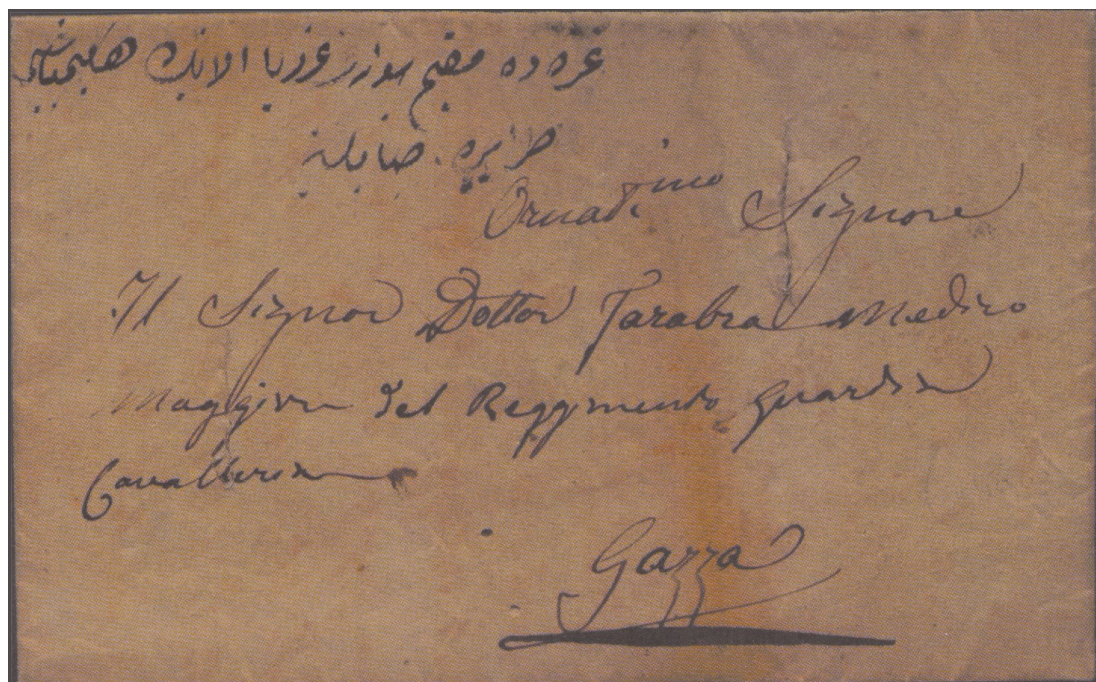

Fig. 2: Official-to-official letter dispatched by MAP, showing the address translated into Arabic. The letter, dated 19.10.1835, is from an administrator at the military medical corps in Cairo to Dr. Tarabra, chief doctor of the Reggimento Generale Cavalleria in Gaza, which was under Egyptian rule at the time. The cover is slitted for disinfection (fumigation against cholera).

The author then discusses the Posta Europea instituted by Carlo Meratti when he expanded his commercial forwarding operation in 1831 by opening two branches (Cairo and Alexandria) for the public and conveying mails daily between the two cities within 24 hours. Ramadan argues that official and commercial mails were carried by MAP for free and that consequently any letter not marked by Meratti's Posta Europea must have been conveyed by MAP. The book by Luca D. Biolati is referenced, concluding that from 1843 MAP carried the mails of Posta Europea between Cairo and Alexandria under contract and that MAP no longer accepted private mails. In the rest of Egypt, MAP continued its commercial service.

With the full opening of the railway line between Cairo and Alexandria in 1857, Posta Europea, now owned by Meratti's nephew Tito Chini and Giacomini Muzzi, quickly embraced this new transportation means and ceased using MAP for this route. From 1862 Posta Europea was granted free railway transport in exchange for handling official mails in Lower Egypt, with MAP continuing their services south of Cairo. The author discusses the apparent cooperation between the two postal operators. In 1864, after the death of Chini, the Egyptian Government bought out the company for 950,000 francs, the new concern Postes Égyptiennes started in 1865 with Giacomini Muzzi as Director-General.

A chapter centres on the negative (intaglio) seals used by MAP between 1853 and 1865 in eleven towns, with illustration of covers and seals. The Kashaba correspondence ("Asyut Find") is briefly described giving some limited insight in the methods of the Asyut trader Mohamed Aly Kashaba for communicating with other traders and towns as well as his correspondence while on business journeys. Ramadan concludes that MAP continued beyond 1873 in the Sudan, i.e. south of Assouan.

Ramadan then catalogues all the known negative MAP seals (in use 1853–1865), 21 in total:

Cairo (7), Dumyat, Minia, Asyut (3), Girga, Qima, Esna, Assouan (5), and Korosko.<sup>5</sup> All illustrations of seals here are idealised re-drawings. Another chapter looks at methods how to decipher the markings and indications on letters, followed by a study of weights and rates, some useful information on calendars, ship mail, private messenger services, and the development of railway lines.

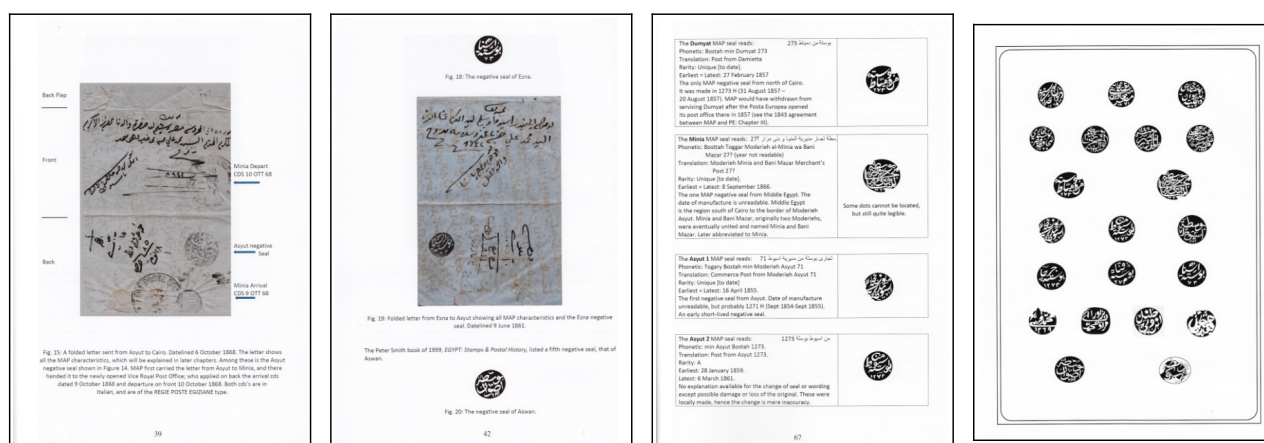

The last chapter is an outlook on further research into three aspects: MAP operating in the Sudan, the fate of the MAP staff, and what came after MAP. I was somehow left with the feeling that the current publication was to have the answers to these, but not so. Tony Schmidt criticised one detail:<sup>6</sup>

Its one single negative aspect is the author's dismissive view of the Posta Europea. He disparages its operations at every opportunity, and makes the untenable assertion that "... the Postal Administration established in 1865 by the acquisition of the Posta Europea was in fact a continuation of the 1825 Vice Royal Service (MAP) under a new and modern management." Hence the subtitle of the book, which implies that the true origin of the Egyptian Post is MAP.

The history and development of the Sea Post Office is briefly set by the author: In 1840, British shipping company Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company (P&O) was contracted to transport mails from Britain to India, and vice versa. Ships travelled from Southampton and Marseille to Alexandria, and from Suez via Aden to Bombay. The overland connection from Alexandria via Cairo to Suez (by boat and coach) was vastly improved from 1859 when use could be made of railway lines.

The question whether these long steamer journeys could be used to sort the mails quickly came up, but such a service was not instituted until 1867: six sets of sorters made the 15-day journey every week between Bombay and Suez. Similar provision was made for the journey from Southampton and Alexandria. By 1869 the Suez Canal was opened, however the overland route for mails by railway was maintained until P&O and the British Post Office had re-negotiated their contract.

From 1870, the Indian Sea Post Office sorted all mails destined for Britain or India, however the British Post Office did not sort the mails in either direction on their section of the journey, i.e. in the Mediterranean Sea. By 1890 the increasing amount of mails could no longer be matched by an increase in staff, given the restricted accommodation on board. In order to better connect their shipping routes, P&O chose Aden as the port where the India line met the Australia line, so all mails were transhipped there. Consequently, the Sea Post Office sorted mails only between Bombay and Aden (a five day journey), and vice versa.

In the early years of the 20th century sorting at sea became increasingly unviable due to the conditions for the staff on board and the ever-increasing amount of work. Plans to abolish the Sea Post Office were undertaken and sorting facilities were to be erected as part of the development of the new Alexandra Docks in Bombay. However the outbreak of WWI resulted in the abrupt end of sorting at sea as sailings became more irregular and the accommodation could no longer be provided by P&O: from 14th August 1914 all mails to Britain got sorted at Bombay G.P.O., and the last mail to India sorted at sea arrived there on 27th August 1914. After WWI sorting was undertaken at the Foreign Mail Sorting Office at Ballard Pier, where 150 to 175 sorters and 100 packers and carriers were able to sort the incoming mails within a few hours, a task that took the 14 or staff at sea some some five days.

The main body of Dovey's book is the detailed classification of types and sets of types of cancellers, each being afforded a chapter of its own. This is based on the collection of the now late Peter Bottrill, providing all the information, and, as Dovey stresses: "had he not do so then the complete and total information would never have been possible. We owe his collection a great debt and on his passing it was, alas, sold and scattered in all directions."

The first date-stamp was used on 20th September 1868, with each crew of sorters being issued with a distinct index letter. Generally, several identical cancelling devices existed, but only some variations can be discerned from strikes. There are eleven types of postmarks plus one type of a negative (intaglio) date-stamp. Each is shown and catalogued in detail, often depicted on cover. Paquebot marks, overland postage due and other tax markings, directional markings, registration hand-stamps and other types are dealt with in chapters of their own.

The tome is concluded by a quick guide showing all types in summary (even this goes to 14 pages!), a list of ships with dates of their deployment, a bibliography, and a map.

The companion tome "Timetable and Statistics for Sailings" does exactly that: it's a basic listing of every sailing – Bombay–Aden/Suez and vice versa – with departure and arrival dates, the vessel's name and (where applicable) the "set letter" (i.e. index letters "A", "B", "C", and so forth) used in many of the types of cancellers.

To introduce the reader, Giray briefly outlines the genesis of World War I, the belligerent nations and coalitions and major battlelines. As nobody expected the war to continue for four years, all countries came badly prepared to cope with large numbers of Prisoners of War (POW) and civilian internees. The setup of camps was generally chaotic, resulting in often unsatisfactory sanitary conditions and some mistreatment of POWs.

The longer the war went on, the more dramatic the situation became, also for the countries' own civilian population, especially with regard the supply of foodstuffs and medicines. Officers were generally treated very differently to ordinary soldiers and not forced to labour for the capturing country.

When it came to the Ottoman Empire the soldiers captured came primarily from Australia, New Zealand, India, Rumania, Russia, and France, while most Ottoman POWs went to camps in Russia, Egypt, India, and Burma. Repatriation of POWs started only after hostilities ended in 1918 and many soldiers were kept in servitude for some years, often returning only by the early 1920s.

Giray briefly looks at various organisations involved with POWs: the International Red Cross, the Ottoman Red Crescent, the Danish Red Cross (which lead the organisation of communications), the International Feminist Information Bureau, and the Universal Esperanto Association.

The main body of the book is divided into two parts: Ottoman POWs and POWs in the Ottoman Empire. Although structured on geographical lines, Giray is not cataloguing each POW camp with its postal and censorship markings, but rather documents a whole plethora of related material: photos, postcards, reports, covers, letters, sports and cultural activities, theatre, camp newspapers, and war cemeteries. This gives a multi-faceted insight into the life and plight, the joys and sorrows, of POWs and internees.

The first part ends in images of war cemeteries, the second part concludes with facsimiles of the 1917 agreement between Great Britain and Turkey on the treatment and repatriation of soldiers and civilians, and the British Government report of 1918 thereon.

I was very impressed by the wealth and breadth of the material shown. The bulk comes from the author's extensive collection, parts of which were previously exhibited, most noteworthy at the Houses of Parliament in London in 2015 and at the Yunus Emre Institute in Alexandria in 2016. The tome concludes with a bibliography.

This is a refreshing new perspective on a well-known topic, wholly leaving aside any philatelic cataloguing of detention facilities and their postal and censor markings, instead focussing on the personal side of history.

My only critical points about Giray's book are of a technical nature: the page layout has too small margins, especially the gutter is far too narrow, and a dust-jacket (or a soft cover) would have been preferable to the gold-embossed hard cover.

Request for Information: Philatelic Literature in Arabic (Russell Turner)

Russell Turner writes:

I am compiling a philatelic bibliography and I endeavour to include works in all languages. Whilst works in English, German, French, and so on, remain accessible, other languages are difficult. In particular I have found Arabic sources are very few. I use the major libraries such as the Bibliotheca Alexandrina, the National Library of Iran, and so on, and also Brian Birch's references,<sup>1</sup> as well as Andrew Gondocz bibliography on Arab countries.<sup>2</sup>

I will look through your own journal and I should gain a few more. Do you know of any others than can help me along? There must be heaps that I just don't see, usually because I don't know the right Arabic words to type into the library's searches. Sadly I don't speak any other language than English.

Editor: I do not speak Arabic either, so help is needed by native speakers with local expertise. I have in fact very little info on books and journals in Arabic. These are mainly incidental and sporadic, e.g. reference on Facebook, at best. Arab collectors tend to write in English or French, the language of colonial rule.

I can add to Russell's list the three bibliographies on my website,<sup>3</sup> as well as Cumulative Index to R. Howard Courtney's THE ARAB WORLD PHILATELIST 1978–1982.<sup>4</sup> None of these has more than a few Arabic entries. Further points of enquiry would be the various specialist societies (such as those featured in my 'Recent Philatelic Journals' section) and local collectors groups.<sup>5</sup>

I forwarded Russell's mail to Peter Moorer, who compiles databases providing references for word processors like MS Word or LibreOffice via the open access facilities of Zotero.

Peter Moorer writes:

[...] My Middle East database is online and can be found at zotero.org.<sup>6</sup> At the moment I have 780 entries for the Middle East, but not limited to books. I have included articles from the AL-BARĪD, THE MIDDLE EAST PHILATELIC BULLETIN (thanks to Tobias), RANDOM NOTES (Saudi Arabia), THE COLLECTORS CLUB PHILATELIST, and a few issues of OPAL. You can only search the database unless I invite you to become a member (only administrators are able to add entries).<sup>7</sup> [...] I have a hard time finding Arabic books and publications. Their title would need to be translated into English

New Discovery: Gum-side Printing of the 1923 5p Ay Yıldız (Jens Warnecke)

Jens Warnecke writes:

The stamp shown (5p, Ay Yıldız, MiNr. 815) is printed on the gum side. Since it was bought and paid for, it naturally had to be used. So it was glued onto a cover put it in the postbox. Result: cancelled 15.02.1339 (15.05.1923), and the Turkey collector is happy for it today.

(Bob Stuchell, Bernd-Dieter Buscke, Avo Kaplanian, pp. 124–126)

Bernd-Dieter Buscke writes:

Generally speaking, the postage issue of Jordan is very complex. Without official notifications from post office publications and Gazettes, etc., it is difficult to fully understand postage rates, even after 50 years of collecting. I have condensed from my collection some key dates and rates and can show a selection of covers. In my opinion all, except figs. 3, 13, and 14, are of a commercial nature, i.e. not philatelic.

It should be noted that postage to Great Britain used to be lower from the same postage as to other destinations; also commercial mail (like banks) were probably allowed different postage rates in the early days.

Bob Stuchell writes:

I read the article about my Jordan post card and it seems clear that the 4m rate is for printed matter. The article shows a 1925 card to Paris with 5m postage which must also be a printed matter rate. I am attaching a scan of a similar card sent from Amman in June 1925 with 10m postage which is the correct international post card rate. It seems that you could pay a printed matter rate if you asked for it.

Request for Information: Pogon Ambulant Post Office – A Rural Postal Service in Ottoman Times?* (Folkert Bruining)

Folkert Bruining writes:

For a long time I am a collector of Ottoman postmarks. As you know, it is a very extensive collection area. So you are regularly surprised by things you did not know yet.

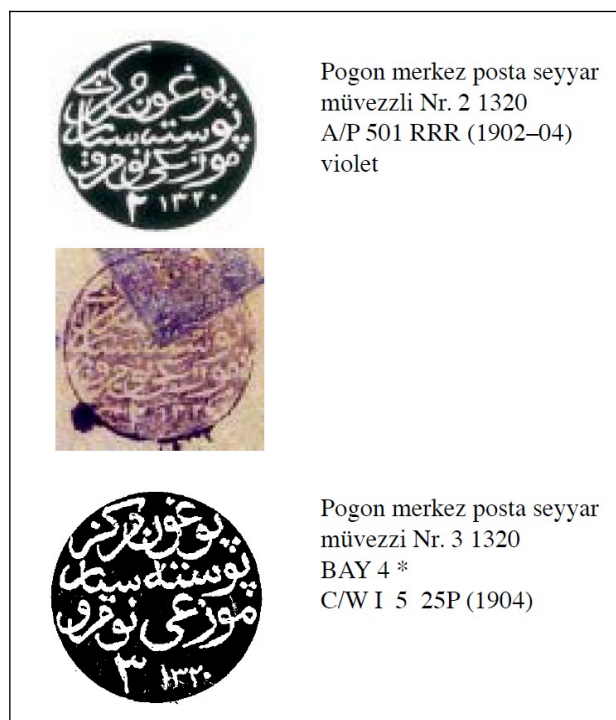

A short time ago I bought on eBay a postmark (fig. 1, on the right) described as “Pogon mobile mail officer”. I looked it up in the Birken catalogue and found a description of the postmark “Pogon merkez posta seyyar müvezzli Nr. 2 1320”, which literally translated as “Pogon ambulant post office postman number 2 1320”. Birken gives no further context. A second and similar postmark is also mentioned by him (fig. 3).<sup>8</sup>

Pogon (Poghon, پوغون, Poğon, Βοστίνα, Voşđina, Voshtinë, Πωγωνιανή, Pōgōnianē, Pogoniani) was a place in the Ottoman vilayet of Janina (Yanya), or to be more precise, in the sanjak of Ergiri (fig. 2). Around 1900 the village had only a few hundred inhabitants. Nowadays the place is situated in the Greek province of Epirus.

Fig. 2: Map of Ergiri sancağı.<sup>9</sup>

8 Page 25 in vol. Yanya of: Birken, Andreas: Die Poststempel = The postmarks. Hamburg: AROS, 2019.

9 Birken, 2019, p. 20.

10 Birken, 2019, p. 25.

Around 1900 the place was not connected with other cities by a railway. Nor was it located on an important waterway. Hence my surprise to find a kind of a 'TPO' postmark. What is the explanation? In Coles & Walker I read:<sup>11</sup>

The inscription on this negative seal [...] reads, in Turkish: 'Poghon merkez posta seyyar mevezgi(?) numara 3, 1320', which translated into English means roughly 'Bogon central (or principal) travelling post ? number 3, A.D. 1904'. There was no railway in this remote area, so it is not a T.P.O. in the sense of a railway postmark. We can only suggest that mail from outlying villages and hamlets was collected by a travelling postman. This properly belongs to the postal history of travelling post offices which still remains much of a mystery during the time of the sultanate.

In my own library I could not find any additional information besides this. If I have understood it correctly then we have an example of a rural postal service. But if there was a rural service in Pogon, why not in other places in the Ottoman empire? My question is whether there are more examples known of rural services comparable with Pogon. And is any literature known about rural postal services in Ottoman times, say around 1900?

Jordan: Military Cancel (Arab Legion) "M 30" (1955) (Bernd-Dieter Buscke)

Bernd-Dieter Buscke writes:

Recently I was able to acquire a cover (shown below) of the British forces in Jordan. It carries a 6d British franking and the British field post cancellation no. 575 dated 17th July 1955, but also shows a Jordanian rubber field post hand-stamp "M30" of the same date (see figure to the right). This latter mark I have not seen before. Who knows more about this Jordanian military postmark type? Are there other such cancels of this type?

Turkey 1921/1922: Is there a third Adana overprint series? (Willy Pijnenburg)

Willy Pijnenburg writes:

As is known, there are two series with the so-called “Adana” overprint. The first was issued on 1st December 1921 (MiNr. 754–766, İSFİLA 1051–1063), a second is dated 5th January 1922 (MiNr. 779–786, İSFİLA 1071–1078).

This was probably not enough for someone and he tried to create a third series. He did not get very far: apart from the ones mentioned above, I know of only two stamps with the overprint “Adana 5 kananusani 1338” overprint, namely on MiNr. 771/772 (İSFİLA 1083/1084). Judging by the postmarks (“Scudari” and “...ik”) they seem genuinely used. Who knows more about these “stamps”?

The Hashemite Philatelist – An April Fools’ Joke from 1968 (Khalid Omaira)

Khalid Omaira found this in the April 1968 edition of the journal “The Philatelist”:

We must congratulate the Hashemite Philatelist in arranging that each issue arrives promptly on time on the first of the month. The April issue is no exception to the rule and it is this which now attracts our attention.

Many of our readers already know the stout work done by the Middle-East countries (Paraguay in particular) in promoting an interest in the art masterpieces that lie in their National Pinacotecas, hitherto undiscovered by the tourist. It is the job of any good government to sell its goods abroad and thus pave the way for prosperity at home. It is natural, therefore, that the April issue continues where the March issue left off. It tells the story that lies behind the lesser known masterpieces of Poisson d’Avril (not to be confused with Toussaint L’Ouverture) and, in particular, the love life of La Maja Gioconda, better known as “Money” Lisa, a famous courtesan of Rome.*

Many of our readers will be interested to learn of the PAQUEBOT markings employed in connection with the Consular Post Offices in the Arabian desert. The ships that crossed the desert were built at Camel Laird around the years 1850-59 and were specially constructed for this purpose. On the ship’s side was slung a mobile box in which letters could be posted. When the ships departed to the sound of loud gurking on board, the boxes were locked and remained so until they reached Port Side at the far end of the Suet Canal. The mail was then handed over to the nearest Post Office where it received the normal Paquebot marking.

Special precautions were taken to prevent the water from damaging the mail that was carried. It was stored in a special tank called the hump and this was quite waterproof. This is probably the reason why all covers known bear the special cachet NOT DAMAGED BY SEA WATER.

MEPB 17: Request for Information: Mysterious Cover from Saudi Arabia to Cairo 1973 with Israeli Military Connection (Harris Wolman, pp. 119)

Dr. Uwe Gräbe writes:

This Saudi letter with Israeli postmarks has indeed caught my attention. It seems quite clear to me that Mr. Sergeant Gabi Kor(e)n apparently found it inventive to forward a letter from Saudi Arabia to an Egyptian government agency, which had probably fallen into his hands in 1973 during the hostilities on the Sinai, with an Israeli stamp and postmark to his family in Netanya.

I have searched for a name or rank “קורן” (koren): it is simply the family name Koren (or Korn) and definitely no military rank, and no “Colin” either; and “2299” is not a base number, but simply the number of the civilian post office box.

So this would be the story of the envelope: Someone from Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, sent it to some government office in Nasr City, Cairo. Maybe, the recipient of the letter carried it around while fighting the Israelis in 1973. This letter fell into the hands of the Israeli soldier “Sergeant Gabi Korn”, personal number (M.' = Mispar Ishi) 2134267. Gabi Korn re-sent it from Military Post (D.Z. = Do'ar Zva'i) 3015 to Me'ir Korn, Post Office Box 2299 in Netanya, Israel. Maybe as a souvenir to his family back home?? Anyway, he put an Israeli stamp on top of the Saudi postmark underneath. When the letter was sent, it was stamped (triangular stamp) at Military Post Office (D.Z. = Do'ar Zva'i) 2828.

Hence, Sergeant Korn seemingly fabricated a war souvenir which had the Israeli postal marks on top of the original Saudi ones.

Request for Information: Iraqi Postmarks Research (Rainer Fuchs)

Rainer Fuchs writes:

Some time ago I have purchased the postcard from Mosul via Baghdad to France (fig. 1). The rate of 3 Annas usually indicates a conveyance via the Overland Mail Baghdad–Haifa. Interesting here is the position of the date: in this type of postmark it usually more in the centre of the inner circle and not on the upper side, directly underneath the “SOR” (i.e. Baghdad Sorting Post Office) (fig. 1a).

This card, better said the postmark, leads me to the question which collector these days is specialising on the postmarks of Iraq and keeps track of new findings and updated usage dates. Over the years I have seen so many unrecorded postmarks and cachets from Iraq.

The books by Proud are outdated and the collection of Patrick Pearson has been sold some time ago by the German auction house Christoph Gärtner. I feel that the area is not studied and kept up-to-date as much as it deserves. I would love to be proven wrong! I assure anyone who studying Iraqi postmarks that I'm happy to provide images of items when I come across them.

The Dissolution of The Holyland Philatelic Society (HPS) (Tobias Zywietz)

Tobias Zywietz writes:

The Holyland Philatelic Society (formerly British Association of Palestine-Israel Philatelists) has now been formally dissolved. Back in May 2019, its president Alan Tunkel informed the remaining members (from what I gather these were about 40 persons, HPS had at its peak over 300 members) about the plans to dissolve the society. By then HPS had effectively ceased to function. Tunkel said then:

Our link with our members was the BAPIP Bulletin and we have failed to find a new editor and the last editor was having real difficulty in securing new articles. Most of our membership is not in London or the UK and therefore meetings have never been the main activity of the Society. The Committee met recently and discussed our options. They include seeking to merge with another society, or dissolution. However, we have had difficulty in finding a society with which our members would wish to merge. It seems likely therefore that we will dissolve, and this then begs the question of what to do with our assets. [...]"

Tunkel's assertion that no articles were forthcoming is definitely wrong as I myself offered articles specially written for the BAPIP BULLETIN several times. After David K. Smith first gave notice about his intention to resign in 2015 the board searched for a new editor and was later that year in discussion with one person to take over the role. However the board refused to make the appointment on political grounds. Without this rather misguided episode, the MIDDLE EAST PHILATELIC BULLETIN would likely never have been born. Some sort of consolation, given the circumstances.

Two years later board member Adrian Andrusier 'volunteered' for the editorship. When I sent him articles, he responded in February 2018 that he was in the process of collating a bulletin before April. In the end, nothing came of it: I never heard back from him. In December 2018, Tunkel told that members would not be asked to renew their subscriptions. So, with much regret, issue 173 of June 2016 was the last BAPIP BULLETIN issued by this, formerly pre-eminent, society.

12 340 Fils (2.03.1998), 380 Fils (1.06.1999).

13 260 Fils (2.03.1998).

14 760 Fils (2.03.1998), 880 Fils (1.06.1999).

Tunkel's letter announcing the formal dissolution, dated January 2021, is shown below. Upon my suggestion, Tunkel provided a run BAPIP Bulletins to the Philatelistische Bibliothek Hamburg e. V. (Hamburg Philatelic Library).

Holyland Philatelic Society

January 2021

Dear Member

I hope that it has not escaped your attention that the Holyland Philatelic Society, publisher of the BAPIP Bulletin, has closed down. We had a good run of some 70 years, but our membership has aged, and we have been unable to attract younger newcomers with an interest in the postal history of the Holy Land.

Having ceased to function, I have been left holding HPS funds and the final decision of the committee was that I should purchase and distribute to the membership a copy of the late Zvi Alexander's book, Milestones in the Postal History of the Holy Land. This was published by the Eretz Israel Museum in Tel Aviv, where his collection is housed. Accordingly, please find enclosed your copy of this beautiful book. I hope that you find it interesting and a fitting souvenir by which to remember the HPS. I also enclose 1 or 2 of our own HPS Monographs.

I recognise that time has moved on and it is possible that some members who receive this letter will have ceased collecting or disposed of their collections or even passed away. If, for any reason, this book is no longer of any interest to you or your family then please donate it to the library of your local school or synagogue etc where it may be appreciated by others and may help to stimulate interest in postal history and philately. Please do not return it to me!

I am also pleased to enclose 1 or 2 booklets written and published by Dr Simon Cohen. He has kindly donated these and hopes that they will be of interest to you or that you will pass them on to others who may appreciate them. Should you wish to contact him his email is: mail@simonyael.co.uk.

It is always sad when a Society has to close. However, we had researched and published most of what could be said about the postal history of the Holy Land and copies of the BAPIP Bulletin will grace the shelves of philatelic libraries around the world for many years to come.

I hold many spare copies of the Bulletin and can supply back numbers free of charge but subject to payment of postage. Please email me if you require any.

Yours sincerely,

Alan Tunkel

Request for Information: UAE Postage Rates (Folkert Bruining)

Folkert Bruining writes:

For AL-BARĪD, the journal of the Dutch society Filatelistische Contactgroep Islamitische Wereld Al Barīd, I'm writing an article about Ras al-Khaimah. In order to discriminate between philatelic covers and covers that were correctly franked and actually went through the regular postal process, I am trying to ascertain postal rates of the time. My main focus is on the period 1964 to 1972, and not just on Ras al-Khaimah but also other Gulf states.

It has been hard to find any such information. Do you have any information in your archive about the rates of the Gulf States? And if not, is it possible to place a request for information?

Editor: To mind comes Terry Jones' and Thomas Johansen's excellent ARABIAN GULF STATES POSTAL HISTORY QUARTERLY. However, Folkert tells me he already looked through vols. 1 to 19 of these journals. Can anyone help Folkert and provide relevant material?

International Reply Coupons of Turkey: Greek Occupation of the Island of Lesbos with Mytilene 1912 (Wolfgang Leimstentoll)

Wolfgang Leimstentoll writes:

Ottoman IRCs are no per se rare, but they are scarce. Here's a rare example, not cancelled, but it can still be dated. The island of Lesbos (Λέσβος) with its capital Mytilene (Μυτιλήνη) was taken over by the Greeks from 8th November 1912. All stamps and stationery found in the Turkish post office was overprinted with a three-line surcharge "Ελληνική Κατοχή Μυτιλήνης" (Greek occupation of Mytilene) by local printers Salpinx.<sup>1</sup> This apparently also happened to the IRCs present:

A few Words about the Hand-Stamps of Turkey

by Léon T. Adjémian, Road and Bridge Engineer, Broussa

Copyright © 1897

This article was published in 1897 in a German philatelic magazine,<sup>1</sup> at a time when attention to collecting postmarks was still in its infancy. This article (and its second part from 1898)<sup>2</sup> is probably the earliest presentation of Turkish postmarks in philatelic literature.

From a scientific standpoint, of course, the articles are outdated, but they still represent an important part of philatelic history.

As is well known, stamps were not issued in Turkey, i.e. the Ottoman Empire, until 1862. Friends and collectors acquainted to me have repeatedly asked me how letters were franked before 1862. This was very simple, and the purpose of these lines is to explain it briefly.

Before 1862, Turkey had hand-stamps similar to those of France and other countries, which were used to frank letters and parcels, just like our stamps are now.

The use of these was as follows: After the postman had taxed the letters according to their weight and received the amount from the sender, he stamped the letter with the hand-stamp shown below, indicating that the postage had been paid and that the letter was therefore free. Before this, however, the letter was entered in a register and given a serial number.

In my collection I have hand-stamps on entire letters from Constantinople, Broussa, Smyrna, Angora, etc., from the years 1814 and after.

These hand-stamps already existed before 1844 and were used for both normal and registered letters. As soon as hand-stamps are used by the post office for franking letters, they are indisputably to be regarded as real stamps, as happened in other countries, and therefore eligible for collection; today, hand-stamps from various countries and their colonies are also collected in Europe, and I only assume that too little attention has been paid to them up to now.<sup>3</sup>

It also seems that in recent times collecting hand-stamps has aroused more interest, as it offers more instruction to the collecting world than the almost daily issues of Seebek and comrades. The following 13 illustrations of such “franco” markings in original size show the way letters were franked at that time.

The hand-stamps A, B, C, D, E, F were only used specifically for the post office of the Turkish Empire, those in 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7 in the sub post offices and by steamship companies.

The words “Porto-Piastre”, which are printed on a small strip of paper pasted next to the hand-stamp, had the purpose of indicating the payment of an extra postage, which was handwritten next to it.

1 Unfortunately, I have not yet been able to find out the original publication, the journal was called “[??] Post”. The article appeared in 1897 in issue no. 10 on pp. 90–91.

2 Follows on p. 132.

3 This is the point of view of the author. We are of the opinion that franco hand-stamps, like postage stamps and their predecessors, belong in a special collection, but that does not make them ‘real’ stamps.
(Footnote in the original article).

I hope one day to be able to complete this interesting series of Turkish hand-stamps from 1840–1860 in order to present them to the critical minds of collectors and amateurs. I would like to ask philatelic friends in the Orient for their friendly support.

Ein paar Worte über Handstempel der Türkei.

Wie bekannt, sind in der Türkei Briefmarken erst im Jahre 1862 ausgegeben worden. Freunde und Sammler meiner Bekanntschaft haben mich wiederholt gefragt, wie man denn eigentlich vor dem Jahr 1862 unsere Briefe frankierte. Dies war sehr einfach, und Zweck dieser Zeilen soll es sein, dies in Kürze zu erklären.

Vor 1862 hatte die Türkei Handstempel, welche denen von Frankreich und anderen Ländern ähnlich waren und, wie jetzt unsere Briefmarken, zur Frankierung von Briefen und Paketen verwendet wurden.

Die Verwendung derselben geschah folgendermaßen:

Nachdem der Postbeamte die Briefe nach ihrem Gewicht taxiert und dessen Betrag vom Absender empfangen hatte, stempelte er mittelst der unten abgebildeten Handstempel das Zeichen auf den Brief, dass das Porto bezahlt, somit derselbe frei wäre. Vorher aber wurde der Brief nach einer laufenden Nummer in ein Register eingetragen.

Ich besitze in meiner Sammlung Handstempel auf ganzen Briefen aus den Jahren 1844 u. s. w. von Constantinopel, Broussa, Smyrna, Angora etc.

Diese Handstempel existierten schon vor 1844 und wurden sowohl für einfache wie auch für eingeschriebene Briefe benutzt. Sobald Handstempel von der Post zum Freimachen von Briefen verwendet werden, so sind dieselben unstreitig als wirkliche Briefmarken zu betrachten, wie dies in anderen Ländern geschah, und somit sammelberechtigt; man sammelt ja heute in Europa ebenfalls Handstempel von verschiedenen Ländern und ihren Kolonien, und ich nehme nur an, dass man sich bis dato nur zu wenig damit beschäftigt hat*). Es scheint auch, dass in jüngster Zeit das Sammeln von Handstempeln mehr Interesse erweckt, bietet es doch der Sammlerwelt mehr Belehrung, als die fast täglich erscheinenden Emissionen von Seebek und Genossen. Aus den nachfolgenden 13 Abbildungen derartiger Frankostempel in Originalgröße ersieht man die Art der damaligen Brief frankierung.

A = Postahanéi deralié (Postbureau von Constantinopel) 1859.

B = Udjréti aleumichdir (die Taxe ist bezahlt) 1857.

*) Dies ist der Standpunkt des Herrn Verfassers. Wir vertreten die Ansicht, dass Frankostempel allerdings gleich den Freimarken als deren Vorläufer in eine Spezialsammlung gehören, wirkliche Briefmarken werden sie aber dadurch noch lange nicht.

C = An djanib posta Angora (von der Post in Angora) 1844.

D = An djanib posta Izmir (von der Post in Smyrna) 1845.

E = An djanib posta deralié (von der Post in Constantinopel) 1845.

f.

F = Vapor (Dampfschiff) 1866. Nachdem die Briefmarken ausgegeben waren, wurde dieser Handstempel noch immer auf den türkischen Schiffen benutzt.

1.) Posta dei piroscafi Ottomani Constantinopoli, Porto bezahlt, porto piastre 2 (1859).

4.

4.) Posta dei piroscafi Ottomani Constantinopoli, Porto bezahlt (1857).

2.) Bezahltes Porto. Porto Piaster  $3\frac{1}{2}$  (1858).

3.) Ottomanische Gesellschaft Constantinopel, Porto bezahlt (1854).

7.) Ottomanische Gesellschaft Constantinopel, Porto bezahlt (1847).

5.) Agenzia dei Vapori Ottomani in Constantinopoli, Porto bezahlt (1854).

6.) Posta dei piroscafi Ottomani della Zecca Cospoli, Porto bezahlt (1860).

Die Handstempel A, B, C, D, E, F sind nur speziell für die Postbureaux des türkischen Reiches verwendet worden, diejenigen 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7 in den Neben-Postanstalten und Dampfschiffahrtsgesellschaften.

Die Worte „Porto-Piaster“, welche sich auf einem kleinen Streifen Papier gedruckt neben dem Handstempel geklebt befinden, hatten den Zweck, die Bezahlung eines Mehr-Portos anzuzeigen, welches handschriftlich daneben angebracht wurde.

Ich hoffe eines Tages diese interessante Serie der türkischen Handstempel von 1840–1860 weiter vervollständigen zu können, um dieselben der Kritik der Sammler und Liebhaber vorzulegen. Philatelistische Freunde im Orient bitte ich bei Vorkommen um ihre freundliche Unterstützung.

Fälschungen.

Über die Fälschungen der französischen Nachpostmarken zu 1, 2 und 5 fr. schwarz, gezähnt erläutert die „Revue Philatélique française“ die besonderen Erkennungszeichen dieser Fälskate. Das Gesamtbild der echten Marken ist klar und rein, dagegen haben die Fälschungen verschwommene, unscharfe Linien, und es treten besonders die Einzelheiten bei dem Original weit schärfer hervor, als bei der Nachahmung. Bei den echten Marken sind die weissen Buchstaben breiter als bei den unechten, dagegen weist das Original dünnere schwarze Buchstaben auf. Die falschen 1 und 2 fr. Marken sind kleiner in der Höhe als die Originale, bei der nachgemachten 5 fr. ist der Unterschied nur unerheblich und derselbe kann nur durch Messungen in der Diagonale beobachtet werden. Das Papier der Fälschungen ist meist dicker als das der echten Marken. Infolge ihrer Herstellung auf lithographischem Wege zeigen die falschen Marken keinerlei Eindruck auf der Rückseite, während man bei den im Buchdruck angefertigten Originalen das schwache Relief des Clichés gewahren kann. Die Farbe der Fälskate hat einen leichten grauen Schein, die der Originale sind intensiv schwarz.

Postmuseum-Rom.

Betreffs dieses neu in's Leben gerufenen Postmuseums geht uns folgendes italienisches Zirkular zu:

Mit Zirkular No. 34 vom 26. Dez. 1890, abgedruckt in der Bullettino postale No. 1 von 1891, wurde ein Postmuseum eingerichtet. In der That sind auch in diesem Jahre eine Anzahl von Gegenständen, die den Postdienst betreffen, gesammelt worden, aber das Ministerium konnte infolge vieler Arbeit, die ihm obliegt, der Angelegenheit nicht die Aufmerksamkeit widmen, welche sie verdient hätte, so dass die gesammelten Gegenstände nicht geordnet wurden, und man auch noch nicht daran dachte, sie in einem besonderen Lokal zu vereinigen im Gegensatz zu dem, was man bereits beim Telegraphenmuseum unternommen hat.

Das Ministerium hat nun beschlossen diesem Zustand ein Ende zu machen und hat Herrn Dr. Emilio Diena beauftragt das schon gesammelte Material zu

The Postal Hand-Stamps of Turkey Before the Existence of Postage Stamps

by Léon T. Adjémian, Engineer in Broussa

Copyright © 1898

This article was published in 1898 in a German philatelic magazine,<sup>4</sup> at a time when attention to collecting postmarks was still in its infancy. This article (and its predecessor of 1897) is probably the earliest presentation of Turkish postmarks in philatelic literature. From a scientific standpoint, of course, the articles are outdated, but they still represent an important part of philatelic history.

I was encouraged by my compatriots and also by foreigners, as far as they are hand-stamp enthusiasts, to pursue this study further following on from my previously published article and to look for hand-stamps which were used as postage stamps before the introduction of the postage stamp in the Ottoman Empire. Unfortunately, it is very difficult to obtain them.

Today I am again bringing some postmarks, hoping to please those interested in them and promising to continue the publication, depending on whether I manage to get further possession of this type of hand-stamp.

Before doing so, I would like to apologise to all collectors and interested parties for the involuntary delay in continuing the publication of these curiosities, so I will list them below, divided into two classes, as in my first article, namely:

1. those of the Turkish post offices.
2. those of the agencies of the Turkish steamship companies.

One must not confuse this second category with the stamps of the agencies of Russian Lloyd, the Levant agencies, etc., which were also in use before the existence of postage stamps and which are something completely different, since these have nothing whatsoever to do with our hand-stamps of the Turkish steamer agencies.

I am indebted to Dr. Knopf in Goldberg, who has made serious studies on this third type of hand-stamps, i.e. of the foreign steamship companies, and I always admire his most interesting articles on this subject, as often as he publishes them in the Mitteldeutsche Philatelisten Zeitung.

I. Hand-Stamps, which were used by the various Post Offices of the Turkish Empire.

I will stay a little with the latter to say a word about the date of the letter, which is hand-stamped and comes from the post office in Akhissar (currently under the prefecture of Smyrna) in 1865.

Judging from this letter, it seems as if these hand-stamps were not abolished everywhere as soon as stamps came into use in our country; I think that they first began to be abolished and banned in the large cities and that they were only gradually replaced by postage stamps in all post offices.

<sup>4</sup> Unfortunately, I have not yet been able to find out the original publication, the journal was probably called "[???] Post". The article appeared in 1898 on pp. 101–103.

This is how I explain the fact that after the introduction of postage stamps, some of these postmarks could still be used as stamps in post offices where postage stamps probably did not yet exist. At the moment I cannot be sure of the reason for their absence, especially why they were used in Akhissar at such a late date (1865), but I will study the reason in more detail and hope to be able to clarify this shortly. In the meantime, it is important to know that these hand-stamps (including those of 1865) were paid for like stamps and the postage tax was calculated according to the distance from the destination.

Fig. q: an djanib postahanéï amiré (from the main post office) on a letter from Constantinople dated 1857.

Fig. t: Udjréti alinadjakdir (postage due) on a letter from Bilédjik to Constantinople, dated 1860.

On fig. t: This hand-stamp thus serves the same purpose as the “T” today on unfranked letters. The addressee of this piece, who was probably in Stambul, undoubtedly had to pay the postage required in that city.

II. Hand-Stamps of the Agencies of the Turkish Steamship Companies.

In order to understand the existence of this hand-stamp no. 11, we must add that the hand-stamps of the agencies of the “Bateaux de la Cie. Ott.” were not only used in the ports, but sometimes also in some towns further away from the sea, such as Brussa (large town, 35 kilometres from Mudania), which also had special hand-stamps for its agency.

I hope that this small study will interest my compatriots as well as foreign stamp collectors and I would like to ask all those who have similar Turkish pieces to lend them to me for a few days (all postage at my expense) so that I can study and publish them for the use of those who are interested and so that I can at the same time prepare a paper on this subject (unique in its kind) which, if perhaps not complete, will at least be detailed enough.

5 I will be able to describe the meaning of the word “zecca” (mint) in more detail in my next article, it is also found on the hand-stamp no. 6 of my first article. (Footnote in the original article).

Frage liegt eine Aeusserung des Herrn Direktor Lindenberg vor, der in einem Artikel über die Stempelsammlung des Reichs-Post-Museums seine Ansichten über das Stempelsammeln im allgemeinen zu erkennen giebt. Herr Lindenberg ist im Interesse der Philatelie für eine reinliche Scheidung zwischen beiden Liebhabereien. Er hält die Verquickung beider für unglücklich. Richtig ist, dass der Stempel oder vielmehr die Sucht, entwertete Marken zu sammeln, für die Philatelie verhängnisvoll gewesen ist. Hätte sich das Interesse der Sammler von vornherein, wie das ja natürlich war, mehr der Marke und nicht in gleicher Weise auch der Entwertung zugewendet, so läge heute vieles anders und man hätte überall, wo es anging, ungebraucht gesammelt und den Stempel nur als notwendiges Uebel da angesehen, wo ungebrauchte Stücke nicht zu haben waren. Durch die — sagen wir — Verirrung, in dem Stempel erst den eigentlichen Wert der Marke zu erkennen, sind vielerlei Uebelstände für die Philatelie entstanden. Wir wären vor allen Dingen vor den unendlich vielen Fälschungen bewahrt geblieben, die sich auf den Stempel erstrecken, die Albernheit der Gefälligkeits-Abstempelung wäre nicht aufgekommen und vieles andere. Aus dem Bestreben nun, Stempel-Fälschungen zu entdecken, ist eine Wissenschaft für sich entstanden und in ihrem Gefolge die Liebhaberei des Stempelsammelns. Es wurden nun zunächst die Stempel derjenigen Länder gesammelt, welche sich die Stempelfälscher besonders aufs Korn genommen hatten, da dort gebrauchte Stücke gesucht und ungebrauchte billig waren (Helgoland, Thurn und Taxis etc.) allmählig erstreckte sich das Stempelsammeln auch auf andere Länder. Beim Sammeln der Kolonialstempel spielte der Patriotismus eine Rolle mit: von irgend welcher philatelistischen Bedeutung ist dieses Sammeln nicht. Die Eigentümlichkeit dieser Sammelrichtung ist, dass sie sich meist nur auf die Entwertungsstempel, nicht auf die Poststempel im allgemeinen erstreckt; wäre letzteres der Fall, dann wäre ja schon eine gewisse Trennung von der Philatelie gegeben, während das Sammeln von reinen Entwertungsstempeln immer noch einen gewissen Zusammenhang mit der Philatelie erkennen lässt und auch wirklich hat, wenn das Sammeln geschieht, um Vergleichsobjekte zur Entdeckung von Fälschungen heranzuziehen.

Ob nun schon heute eine reinliche Scheidung im Sinne des Herrn Lindenberg zwischen der Briefmarkenkunde und der Stempel-Liebhaberei zu empfehlen ist, darüber wollen wir die Ansicht des Herrn Referenten in Dresden hören. Unter der reinlichen Scheidung versteht jedenfalls Herr Lindenberg den Ausschluss der Stempelsammlungen von philatelistischen Veranstaltungen, Ausstellungen und dergleichen. Ausschluss der Besprechungen von Stempeln in philatelistischen Zeitschriften, soweit diese nicht eben auf die Philatelie Bezug haben, als Vorläufer der Briefmarken anzusehen sind oder zur Feststellung der Echtheit einer Marke dienen, (wir haben schon seit längerer Zeit in unserer „Post“ die Besprechungen der Stempel von dem übrigen Teil getrennt) und dadurch Ausübung eines Druckes auf die Stempelsammler, sich zu ihren Zwecken zu organisieren, ohne Anschluss an die philatelistischen Bestrebungen. Die unterschiedlichen Merkmale für eine Briefmarken- und eine Stempelsammlung sind leicht gegeben, selbst in Fällen, wo die beiden auseinanderzubalten schwer erscheint; in der Briefmarkensammlung sind die Stempel der Briefmarken wegen da und in der Stempelsammlung sind die Briefmarken der Stempel wegen da.

Ueber die Stellung, welche der Herr Referent auf dem Philatelistentage, und in der sich daran knüpfenden Besprechung der Philatelistentag selbst dieser Frage gegenüber einnehmen wird, werden wir Gelegenheit haben, in unserer nächsten Nummer zu berichten.

Die postalischen Handstempel der Türkei vor Existenz der Briefmarke.

Von Léon T. Adjémian, Ingenieur in Brussa.

(Fortsetzung des Artikels aus No. 10 vom Jahre 1897).

Ich wurde von meinen Landsleuten und auch von den Ausländern, soweit sie Stempelliebhaber sind, ermutigt, nach meinem bereits früher veröffentlichten Artikel dieses Studium weiter zu verfolgen und nach Stempeln zu suchen, welche vor der Einführung der Briefmarke im ottomanischen Reiche als Briefmarke Verwendung fanden. Die Beschaffung ist leider sehr schwer.

Heute bringe ich nun wieder einige Stempel, hoffe, die Interessenten damit etwas zu erfreuen und verspreche ihnen, die Veröffentlichung fortzusetzen, je nachdem es mir gelingt, mich weiter in den Besitz dieser Art Handstempel zu setzen.

Indem ich zuvor alle Sammler und Interessenten um Entschuldigung bitte wegen der unfreiwilligen Verzögerung, welche die Fortsetzung der Veröffentlichung dieser Kuriositäten erfahren hat, erlaube ich mir, sie nachstehend aufzuführen, eingeteilt wie schon damals in meinem ersten Artikel in 2 Klassen, nämlich:

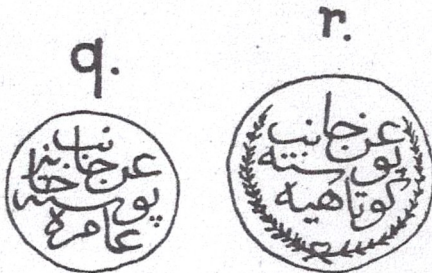

1. in diejenigen der türkischen Post-Bureaux
2. in diejenigen der Agenturen der türkischen Dampfer-Gesellschaften.

Man darf diese zweite Kategorie nicht mit den Stempeln der Agenturen des russischen Lloyd, der Levante-Agenturen u. s. w., welche vor der Existenz der Briefmarken auch in Gebrauch waren und welche etwas ganz Anderes sind, verwechseln. da diese gar nichts mit unsern Stempeln von den türkischen Dampfer-Agenturen zu thun haben. Herrn Dr. Knopf in Goldberg, welcher ernste Studien über diese dritte Art von Handstempeln der fremden Dampfer-Gesellschaften gemacht hat, bin ich zu Dank verpflichtet und bewundere immer seine höchst interessanten Artikel hierüber, so oft er dieselben in der Mittel-deutschen Philatelisten Zeitung veröffentlicht.

I. Handstempel, welche von den verschiedenen Post-Bureaux des türkischen Reiches gebraucht wurden.

q. = an djanib postahanéi amiré (von der Haupt-Post) auf einem Briefe von Konstantinopel vom Jahr 1857.

r. = an djanib posta Kutahia (von der Post in Kutahia) vom Jahre 1843.

t. = Udjréti alinadjakdir (das Porto wird nachgenommen) auf einem Briefe von Bilédjik nach Konstantinopel, datiert vom Jahre 1860.

Dieser Stempel dient also zum gleichen Zweck wie die „T“ heutzutage auf den unfrankierten Briefen. Der Adressat dieses Stückes, welcher sich wahrscheinlich in Stambul befand, hat ohne Zweifel das Porto zahlen müssen, welches in dieser Stadt verlangt wurde.

u. = Postahanéi Sparta (Post-Bureau von Sparta) vom Jahre 1860.

v. = Postahanéi Seuké (Post-Bureau von Seuké) vom Jahre 1858.

x. = Postahanéi Maghnissa (Post-Bureau von Magnésia).

x<sup>b</sup> = Tahud olenmichdir (eingeschrieben); beide x. & x<sup>b</sup> befinden sich auf einem Briefe vom Jahre 1860.

y. = an djanib posta Amassia (Postamt von Amassia) vom Jahr 1847.

z. = Postahanéi Ahissa (Post-Bureau von Ak-hissar) vom Jahre 1865.

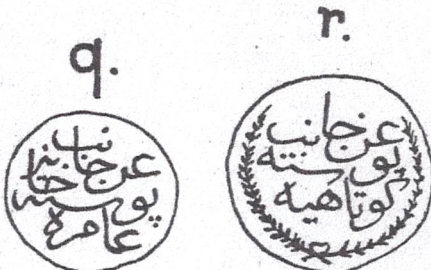

Bei dem Letzteren will ich mich etwas aufhalten, um ein Wort über das Datum des Briefes, der mit dem Handstempel versehen ist und von dem Postamt in Ak-hissar (augenblicklich unter der Präfektur von Smyrna) vom Jahr 1865 herrührt, zu sagen.

Nach diesem Briefe zu urteilen, hat es den Anschein, als wenn diese Posthandstempel nicht sofort, als Marken bei uns in Gebrauch kamen, überall aufgehoben worden wären; ich denke mir, dass man zuerst damit begonnen hat, sie in den grossen Städten aufzuheben und zu verbieten und dass sie erst allmählig bei allen Post-Bureaux durch Briefmarken ersetzt wurden. So erkläre ich es mir, dass nach Einführung der Briefmarken doch noch einige von diesen Handstempeln als Briefmarke haben verwendet werden können in Post-Bureaux, wo Briefmarken wahrscheinlich noch nicht existierten. Ich kann augenblicklich den Grund des Fehlens nicht sicher angeben, besonders nicht, warum man die Stempel in Ak-hissar in einer so späten Zeit (1865) verwendet hat, aber ich werde den Grund noch genauer studieren und hoffe, dies in Kürze aufklären zu können. Nach diesem Briefe zu urteilen, hat es den Anschein, als wenn diese Posthandstempel nicht sofort, als Marken bei uns in Gebrauch kamen, überall aufgehoben worden wären; ich denke mir, dass man zuerst damit begonnen hat, sie in den grossen Städten aufzuheben und zu verbieten und dass sie erst allmählig bei allen Post-Bureaux durch Briefmarken ersetzt wurden. So erkläre ich es mir, dass nach Einführung der Briefmarken doch noch einige von diesen Handstempeln als Briefmarke haben verwendet werden können in Post-Bureaux, wo Briefmarken wahrscheinlich noch nicht existierten. Ich kann augenblicklich den Grund des Fehlens nicht sicher angeben, besonders nicht, warum man die Stempel in Ak-hissar in einer so späten Zeit (1865) verwendet hat, aber ich werde den Grund noch genauer studieren und hoffe, dies in Kürze aufklären zu können. The Great Famine on Mount Lebanon from 1915 to 1918 is an aspect of World War I history little known outside of Lebanon. Even in the country itself, the topic is overwhelmed by sectarian strife: in the areas most affected, 80% of the population was Christian. Instead, the national conscience rather commemorates Martyr's Day as a more unifying moment for the country's diverse communities: on 6th May 1916, dozens of leading Arab Nationalists, from all communities, were executed in both Damascus and Beirut.

The varied communities on Mount Lebanon enjoyed an autonomous status within the Ottoman Empire following the civil-war-like disturbances between Maronites and Druzes in the Summer of 1860: upon pressure from France, Great Britain, Austria-Hungary, Prussia, and Russia, the mutassarifat Mount Lebanon<sup>6</sup> (see map, fig. 1) was created in 1861 with the mutassarif to be a Christian and being directly appointed by and accountable to the Sublime Porte. An advisory council consisted of twelve members: two from each of the main religious groups.<sup>7</sup>

In 1915, the last Christian mutassarif Ohannes Kouyoumdjian Pasha, was replaced with Muslim placemen<sup>8</sup> loyal to Turkey by the new civil and military governor of Syria, Ahmed Cemâl Pasha.<sup>9</sup>

Causes of the Famine

During the First World War, shortages of grain and other foodstuffs were common in most belligerent countries. Many areas of the Ottoman Empire, including Palestine, parts of Syria and Lebanon were, due to geographic, climatic, and economic conditions, unable to produce enough food for their own population, and that even in peacetime. The demand for raw materials from the Middle East led to the region's integration into the Western economy: production shifted from traditional agricultural products like cereals, to export crops like cotton, opium, silk, tobacco, as well as rice, dates, and citrus fruit.<sup>10</sup> Large amounts of grain had to be imported, mainly from Egypt, or transported from other parts of Syria. Mount Lebanon's economy was largely based on non-food crops destined for export through the port of Beirut: tobacco, olives (mainly for soap production), and was particularly dependent on silk production. Firro describes the circumstances:<sup>11</sup>

7 Syriac Maronite (1913 estimate: 58%), Druze (11%), Sunni (6%), Shī'ite (4%), Greek Orthodox (13%), and Melkite Greek Catholic (8%).

Mount Lebanon was more affected by this trend toward agricultural monoculture than were other cash-crop areas. It comprised 320,000 hectares of land, of which 17,000 to 20,000 hectares (6.25 percent) were under cultivation by 1914. Most of the cultivated area (14,000 hectares, or 70–80 percent) was devoted to growing mulberry trees, and most of the rural population was employed in tending them. Although the farmers grew some barley and corn, their harvests did not meet the population's need for grain, which was imported from elsewhere in Syria, particularly from the Hawran, Homs, Hama, and the Bekaa.

Consequently, when World War I halted the silk trade, the Lebanese farmers, dependent for their food supply on other areas, were severely affected. The one-crop economy combined with the difficulties involved in making a rapid transition from growing mulberry trees to food crops led to starvation among the poor. During the war, many people left for Hawran and the coastal plain in search of food and work. But even before the war the industry had caused suffering, particularly among the peasants, when there was a fall in prices.

All of Syria suffered from food shortages during the war, so why the particularly grave situation here? The dependence on non-food cash crops for export can only be part of the answer. The growth of the black market and inflation, especially for basic food items, and the effect of existing and new debts, was evident in most warring countries as well. In the Ottoman Empire the replacement of the gold Lira with paper money further compounded the situation.

The Locust Invasion and other Factors

Historians refer to a number of aggravating factors: A locust invasion devastated crops in 1915, causing panic among the population from April to June of that year.<sup>12</sup> The Allied nations had established a sea blockade which prevented grains and other foodstuffs being imported from other countries (traditionally these mainly came from Egypt).<sup>13</sup>

By December 1914, though, the Triple Entente blockade of the Eastern Mediterranean coast assumed responsibility for the halt in trade. British, Russian, and French cruisers reached, captured, or flooded ships at ports in Haifa, Beirut, and Iskenderun in December.<sup>27</sup> This also meant that trade inside the Ottoman Empire – between Izmir and Beirut or Jaffa and Istanbul – also became impossible. From that point forward, only neutral (primarily American) ships managed to deliver foodstuffs to the Eastern Mediterranean shores, and then only sporadically.

A large effect is attributed to a land blockade imposed by the Ottoman governor, Cemâl Pasha, preventing grain from other regions, like the Ḥawrān or Aleppo, to be shipped to Mount Lebanon. Transport facilities were also largely used by the military, depriving the civilian population's access to any transportation. The needs of the military clearly took precedence over the needs of civilians.<sup>14</sup> Ohannes Pasha reported to the Sublime Porte in 1915:<sup>15</sup>

10 Cf. Firro, 1990, pp. 152.

11 Firro, 1990, pp. 152 and 164/166. The large majority of silk production was exported directly to Marseilles through the port of Beirut.

12 Lebanon was “plunged into the darkness of this cloud of orthopterans which eclipsed the sun and caused panic among the population from 13 April to the end of June 1915.” Cf. Foster, 2015 and 2018.

Up to this point, the shipments of wheat from Aleppo by means of the railway have not been sufficient to meet the needs of the Mountain, whose population exceeds 300,000 people [a gross underestimate]. For this reason, our office has been burdened by complaints from every direction. This time, the train wagons were filled with shipments for the military ... the cutting off of wheat to Mount Lebanon, and Syria, more generally, may lead to famine.

Another compounding effect was the buying-up of crops and animals (camels, horses, mules, etc) by the Army and the arbitrary requisitioning of stocks by military and civil officials,<sup>18</sup> later also by German and Austrian troops under General von Falkenhayn,<sup>19</sup> as well as local corruption and ineffective price controls.<sup>20</sup>

Consequently prices of foodstuffs (wheat, barley, maize, potatoes, oil, etc.) and other commodities (soap, petrol) increased to 40 to 50 times their pre-war levels. Malnourishment and worsening conditions of hygiene compounded epidemics like typhoid fever and malaria.<sup>21</sup> This increased mortality to such an extent that for the large number of corpses mass graves had to be dug. Tanielian writes:<sup>22</sup>

Deprivation and disproportional starvation were daily realities in the commercial coastal cities Latakia, Tripoli, Jaffa, and Beirut, and Mount Lebanon "experienced a famine of epic severity." Contemporary attempts at quantifying the loss of life in Beirut and Mount Lebanon fluctuate between 150,000 and 300,000. With a pre-war population ranging from about 414,800 to 630,000, the size of mortalities hence, floats somewhere between the large margins of one- to two-thirds of the inhabitants. Beirut alone, as its ports were closed, supply lines cut, and deadly diseases silently invading the city, lost approximately half of its residents.

The historian Linda Schilcher sees no proof of malicious intent on the part of Ottoman officials but that they failed to ensure adequate supplies, failed to stem corruption and local speculation, and failed to protect all sections of population equally.<sup>23</sup> Tanielian comes to these conclusions:

Placing the famine into its historical context and looking at it as not simply an 'event' but as a socio-economic process dependent on structural changes taking place in the nineteenth century has shown that the region's incorporation into the world market increased its vulnerability and susceptibility to famine [...]. [...] the Lebanese famine was as much the outcome of long-term historical developments and external non-human factors unrelated to war, as it was the result of immediate necessities of war, its political economy and strain on civilians.

The Famine in the National Conscience

The remembrance of the famine was kept alive by contemporary reports and literature of the post-war period, persisting in popular memory even today: war and famine became inseparable in the conscience of generations. Sectarian and divisive narratives persisted: Christians emphasised their suffering and Muslim profiteering, Muslim accounts centre on the question of loyalty of the Christian population with their links to foreign powers, like France.<sup>24</sup>

In an interview with St  phanie Trouillard,<sup>25</sup> Prof. Youssef Mouawad (American Univ. Beirut) gave these accounts, including the often-quoted scene from a 1939 novel by Tawf  q Y  suf 'Aww  d:

18 Cf. Tanielian, 2012, p. 42.

19 Erich Georg Sebastian Anton von Falkenhayn (1861–1922), Prussian General, Chief of the General Staff (1914), Commander of the 9th Army in Romania (1916), Commander of Ottoman Army Group "Jilderim" (Y  ldırım Ordular Grubu, consisting of Ottoman 4th, 7th and 8th Armies) (1917–1918). He was succeeded in February 1918 by Marshall Otto Viktor Karl Liman von Sanders (1855–1929).

20 Tanielian, 2012, p. 122, says: "The setting of maximum prices without the implementation of strict government control, or Zwangswirtschaft, generally meant only that commodities disappeared from retail stores and instead were sold on the black market for the highest price possible. That was exactly what was happening in Beirut."

21 Tanielian, 2012, p. 92, reports: "By 1916, the price of soap had increased eight-fold, making soap a luxury item to be afforded only by the wealthier segments of society. Cleanliness was not only key in avoiding cholera and typhoid, but also [...] important in keeping lice from multiplying."

22 Tanielian, 2012, p. 5.

23 Schilcher, 1996, p. 255, quoted by Tanielian, 2012, p. 208.

24 Cf. Tanielian, 2012, p. 207.

25 Trouillard, 2014. The article includes several very graphic photographs from the estate of Ibrahim Naoum Kanaan, a government official at the time. Due to copyright issues I cannot reproduce these images here.

People starved to death. There was nothing they could do. They couldn't resist. People went out on the streets delirious, their bellies swollen. There are atrocious descriptions like in Toufic Youssef Aouad's book "Le Pain":

"There was a woman lying on her back, invaded by lice. An infant with huge eyes hung from her naked breast [...] The woman's head was spilled and her hair scattered. From her chest emerged a scratched and bruised breast that the child kneaded with his little hands and pressed with his lips and then gave up crying."

[...] On a personal level, I think people were ashamed to tell what had happened. They did not want to admit that in families, some women were able to offer sexual favours to Turkish officers to feed their children.

Father Salim Daccache, Rector of Saint Joseph University in Beirut, for example, told how his grandmother had to leave his village. On the way, she lost a child whom she had to leave on the side of the road to find bread after three days of walking.

They are not heroic memories and in the mountains, one takes great care of one's image. We do not want to show that his family has been led to do things that are not up to the task. Until the late 1920s, we talked about famine, but then we kept this story to ourselves. There are atrocious things that have not been passed down from generation to generation.

However the break-up of the Ottoman Empire and the creation of a nation state lead the newly empowered political class of Lebanon to present a different image:<sup>26</sup>

Instead the state proposed a memory emphasizing martyrdom and struggle for liberation that most notably would be devoid of sectarian tones. The goal was to present a celebratory memory of the sacrifices of World War I and frame the, albeit artificial, creation of the nation in its most victorious light. The suffering of the majority—men, women and children who died of starvation, succumbed to diseases such as malaria and typhus, or who were conscripted into the Ottoman army never to return to their homes—would be actively silenced by the state. [...]

The state's removal of a memory of communal and distinctly sectarian suffering and its replacement with a memory of heroic martyrdom, liberation, and male sacrifice, is telling and illustrative of the Lebanese state's post-independence politics of memory.

The End of the Famine

The famine only came to an end when allied forces under General Allenby forced the Turkish troops and their German and Austrian allies out of Syria and Lebanon during October 1918. The 7th Division, following the coastal road, reached Ras Nakura on 4th October, 1918, Sidon on the 6th, Beirut on the 8th, and finally ended its campaign in Tripoli on the 18th. The 4th and 5th Cavalry Divisions moved from Damascus via Zahle and the Bekaa Valley to Homs (16th October), reaching Aleppo on the 26th (see fig. 4).

The occupied area became initially "O.E.T.A. North," and was later redesignated as "O.E.T.A. West."<sup>27</sup> It was subsequently transferred to the full control of French troops, in effect following to a large degree the partitioning plans for the now-occupied Ottoman territories agreed between Britain and France in the Sykes-Picot Agreement of May 1916 (see fig. 5).

Although shortly after the arrival of allied troops food transports from Egypt resumed, it took months for food availability and prices to return to normal levels. Aid organisations had been set up to ameliorate the situation, but this has been a neglected part of Lebanon's history, as has the entire famine period.

Relief Committee for the Victims of the Famine in Syria

Bernardo Longo has traced one such organisation and shows philatelic evidence in an article on the website of the Lebanese Philatelic Association:<sup>30</sup>

What I had not seen, or at least, what had never been published, concerns the humanitarian organisations which at the time took care of the population to alleviate their suffering. A recent discovery has put a bit of light on this topic.

It is an envelope sent from Beirut on 11th of June 1919 and addressed to New York, it presents a rectangular purplish seal, barely readable, affixed in the upper left of the cover. Of course thanks to my stubbornness and Mr. Nohra Hobeika, after several attempts I was able to obtain a bilingual transcription in French and Arabic:

The organisation translates as “Relief Committee for the Victims of the Famine in Syria, Beirut & Lebanon Branch”. I ignore the nationality of the organisation but I presume it was Lebanese-French.

1918 Early French and British Military Correspondence from Beirut

by LibanPhil

On 7.10.1918 French naval units led by Admiral Varney landed in Beirut shortly before the British forces reached Beirut and entered the town on 8.10.1918.

A few days after the capture of Beirut postal services to the civilian population were quick to resume and they experienced fast changes in a very short period. In the first week or so after the resumption of postal services, mail was free of charge. That was followed by a very short period in which postage was prepaid in cash and stamps (which were not yet available locally) were applied in Palestine. British stamps were also used for a short time before E.E.F. stamps became available.

Here I show two cards documenting this early period. The card to left was sent free of charge by a French soldier to his wife on 24.10.1918. It was not charged because soldiers had free correspondence privileges "franchise militaire" to communicate with family back home. The free franking has nothing to do with the free franking that was available early on to the civilian population.

The card is relatively early documentation of the French presence in Beirut. The hand-stamp on the card is particularly interesting. It is the earliest mention that I have seen of the French Commissariat on a postal item from Beirut.

At the time, the Commissariat for Syria and Lebanon was not yet established and the term seems to be an umbrella term that covers the whole theatre of operations of the French forces at the time. George Picot was the High Commissioner of France in Palestine and Syria from 1917 to 1919. The card also has a very early use of the "TRESORS ET POSTES 601 A" date-stamp. Usages in 1918 are more often seen in the month of December.

COMMISSARIAT DE LA RÉPUBLIQUE FRANÇAISE EN PALESTINE ET SYRIE

The second card was also sent by a soldier, but this time a British one, on 31.10.1918. Despite the fact that it is endorsed "O.A.S." (on active service) to indicate that it should benefit from free franking privileges, it is nonetheless franked with a British stamp paying the postcard rate of 1 penny (at the time both the U.P.U. and the Empire post card rates were the same). It is correctly franked, but it is not clear why it was not sent free of charge.

The use of British stamps to pay postage in the early period is scarce. Their use on a postcard is even much harder to find. This is the only use that I have personally seen on a post card.

The stamp is tied with the "ARMY POST OFFICE / SZ 8 / A" date stamp. SZ 8 was located in Beirut. According to Firebrace, 14.10.1918 is the earliest recorded date.

Anthony Bluett: With Our Army In Palestine

In the following, I present extracts from Bluett's 1919 book,<sup>31</sup> describing his trek from Palestine into Lebanon and his observations about the dire situation of the civil population there. Where I felt it necessary I explain some of the terms and phrases used by Bluett.

Little is known about Anthony Bluett. In his introduction he gives only few hints, like his unit: "A" Battery, Honourable Artillery Company, and Egyptian Camel Transport Corps. I was unable to trace him into civil life and find out anything about his fate.<sup>32</sup>

Chapter XXI: Over the Ladder of Tyre

On the fifth day out from Haifa we marched into Sidon, whose inhabitants turned out en masse and welcomed the column<sup>33</sup> with great and spontaneous enthusiasm, which left no doubt as to its genuineness, though at times it became a trifle embarrassing.

On the surface the people looked little the worse for four years' privations<sup>34</sup> and ill-treatment at the hands of the Turks, but a glance into the shops as we passed showed little else but fruit in the shape of food; and this is not very satisfying as a sole diet. In some parts of the town pinched faces and wan<sup>35</sup> cheeks were frequent; and one group consisting of an elderly man with his wife and two daughters especially attracted my attention. Their faces were dead-white, as if they had been living below ground for years, and the dull, stunned look of misery in their eyes was terrible to see; obviously they had not yet fully realised their deliverance.<sup>36</sup> The old gentleman, a French Syrian, told me that when, three years before, he had heard of the coming of German troops to Sidon, he gave out to his neighbours that he and his family were going to the north, leaving the empty house in charge of the native caretaker. The family disappeared, and until the hurried departure of the Germans nothing more was seen of them, when they—apparently—returned once more to their home.

In reality, they had never left it. They had retired to a disused wing of the house, barricaded themselves in so skilfully that no one but the old caretaker who looked after the supplies suspected their presence; and there they had lived for three years, never venturing out except to walk at night in their extensive garden! On one occasion the house was occupied by a German staff-officer, and their walks ceased for three weeks; but for the greater part of the time it had remained untenanted.<sup>37</sup> During the period previous to our coming they had been almost entirely without food, other than fruit and dried legumes.

That was the story told to me as nearly as I can remember it, and the lifeless pallor<sup>38</sup> of the old Frenchman's face and those of his family certainly gave colour to the narrative. It is very hard to believe in starvation when you are surrounded on all sides by beautiful gardens and orchards abounding in fruit; and those at Sidon were surely the loveliest on earth. All round the town stretched great masses of green, in the midst of which, like diamonds in a sea of emeralds, were white cupolas and summerhouses, with scores of fountains playing all day long. On the hills behind the gardens were many modern houses admirably built after the Italian fashion, whose mellow terra-cotta blended effectively with the green mass below. Riding through the umbrageous<sup>39</sup> lanes between countless orchards you could believe anything but that people here were starving.

The division had been promised a rest at Sidon for the remainder of the day, but shortly after two o'clock in the afternoon an urgent message came ordering us to make a forced march in order to reach Beyrout, thirty-five miles away, the following night! At four o'clock we left the beach and climbed steadily past those glorious gardens, until we struck the highroad. A few miles outside Sidon, we passed an inn which could not have changed much in character since the time of Christ. It formed a bridge across the road, and thus gave shelter to the passer-by from the noonday heat in summer and the torrential rains in winter; on one side there were the living rooms for the traveller and on the other side the stables wherein his ass<sup>40</sup> or his horse could rest for the night. There were a few men lying in the shade of the "bridge" as we passed, and, peering into the stable, I could just see a donkey contentedly munching at the manger: the whole scene seemed to have come straight out of the New Testament.

Later in the afternoon I noticed a beautiful little house standing in its own garden, and rode over to examine it more closely. One thing only I saw; the rest was blotted out. Nailed to his door was the body of the owner, and beneath lay the charred—yes, charred—remains of what had once been his legs. He had been crucified and burnt alive; the twisted body, and the awful, tortured expression on the martyred man's face, left no room for doubt.

After a halt for a couple of hours at midnight we began the final stage. While it was yet dark we had tremendous difficulty with those cameldrivers who were unable to see at night, the "mush-shuf-bi' leil's" ("can't see-at-nights") we used to call them; and as we had a few blind camels as well the situation called for some ingenuity. The only way to solve the problem was to tie the men's wrists to the saddles of the camel immediately in front of them. They then allowed themselves to be towed along, keeping the rope just taut enough to act as a guide.

Fig. 9:

Plate facing p. 256.

The blind camels were similarly treated, though even then there were accidents. One came shortly before dawn as we were crossing a viaduct with neither wall nor protection of any kind against a thirty-foot drop. A blind camel blundered towards the edge, slipped, and crashed down into the riverbed, and as he had 200 lbs. of biscuits<sup>41</sup> on his back to speed his fall, it looked like a certain casualty. With some difficulty we clambered down to him, and found him not only alive but calmly grazing on the herbage around! And when the biscuits were removed he got up, grunting and snarling, but absolutely uninjured and ready to carry his load again.

As we approached Beyrout the signs of distress among the people grew more and more pronounced. Along the route were several tiny villages whose inhabitants gathered by the roadside to beg for food, and it was awful to see the wolfish way they ate the biscuits we gave them. At many places women stood with jars of water which they offered to the camel-drivers, not, I am sure, as a quid pro quo, but because it was all they had to offer.

Just at the entrance to the olive-groves, which extend for six miles out of Beyrout, I saw a dead child lying by the roadside, and from that point the journey became a succession of heartrending sights. Gaunt, lean-faced men, women thin to the point of emaciation,<sup>42</sup> and children whose wizened<sup>43</sup> faces made them look like old men, lined the route weeping for joy at their deliverance. Every one of our men as he passed handed over his day's rations of bully-beef<sup>44</sup> and biscuits to the starving people; I saw one woman hysterically trying to insert a piece of army biscuit into the mouth of the baby in her arms, and groups of little boys fighting for the food thrown to them. It was pitiful to see the gratitude of people who succeeded in catching a biscuit or a tin of bully; and the way they welcomed our camel-drivers, who, of course, spoke Arabic like themselves, was a revelation.

A man, haggard with want,<sup>45</sup> came out of his little wine-shop and offered me a glass of aniseed,<sup>46</sup> apologising courteously for its poor quality, and explaining that it was the only drink he had been able to obtain for sale during the War! A glance at the rows of empty bottles in his shop-window confirmed the statement. God knows how he had earned his living during the past three years.

Towards evening the head of the long column entered Beyrout: from miles behind on the hills we could see the swinging kilts of the Highlanders, while the sound of the bag-pipes floated faintly back to us. By eight o'clock, we, too, were marching into the town through crowds of delirious people, who clung to the troops as they passed and kissed the boots of the mounted men; it was the most painful, pitiful experience of all. As we swung down the hill towards the beach a man said:

45 Emaciated by hardship.

"You are just in time, monsieur; in six days we should all have been dead."

That was the main thing: we had marched ninety-six miles in six days, we were dog-tired after a last continuous trek of eighteen hours, but—we were in time!

Chapter XXII: Deserted Villages in Lebanon

SIXTY thousand people died of starvation in Beyrout during the War, out of a total population of one hundred and eighty thousand. There is overwhelming proof that this was a part of the brutal policy of systematic extermination adopted by the Turco-Germans towards the weaker races of Syria and Palestine. When Beyrout was evacuated the enemy collected all the food they could lay hands on, including the recently garnered harvest; and what they were unable to carry away with them they dumped in the harbour rather than give it to the starving people. Four hundred tons of foodstuffs were wantonly<sup>47</sup> destroyed in this manner; and as an example of callous and spiteful vengeance, towards a people whose chief fault apparently was that they were hungry, this would be hard to beat.

The mortality amongst children was appalling. You could not ride out of the town without seeing their dead bodies lying by the roadside, where they had dropped from the arms of mothers too weak to carry them, often enough themselves lying dead a few yards farther on. In the poorer quarters of the town, especially near the docks, the dreadful death-roll lengthened every day. The Turks had gone out of their way to destroy many of the houses, with the result that hundreds of people were wandering about, foodless, homeless, and utterly friendless. For the first few days most of our work was carried on in and around the docks, where crowds of women and children congregated daily in the hope of obtaining food. I saw one small boy walking in front of me with a curious, unsteady gait,<sup>48</sup> and just as I drew level with him he pitched forward on to his face without a sound. He was stone-dead when I turned him over; and judging by the terrible emaciation of his body he had died of protracted starvation.

Until the foodships arrived the British Army fed most of the people; I use the word "most" advisedly, for even here there were fat profiteers who had made fortunes out of the War, and who cared nothing for the sufferings of others. The poorer inhabitants literally thronged<sup>49</sup> the various camps in search of food, and with characteristic generosity the troops tried to feed them all! They gave away bully-beef and biscuits to those most in need, and, whenever possible, their tea and sugar rations also; it was painful to see the gratitude of the recipients.

Except amongst the very wealthy both tea and sugar had been literally unknown for four years.

When we entered Beyrout the price of tea was four hundred piastres (£4 2s.) per lb.<sup>50</sup>—and chemically treated stuff at that; and sugar, which was all but unobtainable by anybody, cost three hundred piastres per lb.! Within a week of our arrival you could buy both commodities in the shops at about twenty piastres and five piastres per lb. respectively.

But distress and suffering were not confined to Beyrout alone. On the pleasant hills of Lebanon north of the town are numerous villages through which the Turks had swept like a plague. Here the policy had been not so much starvation as extermination: whole villages were stripped of their inhabitants, who had been forcibly carried away, the men to slavery or death; the women to something worse. You could ride through village after village without seeing a soul, save perhaps an old man who would tell you that he was keeping the keys of the houses for their owners—who would never return. It is impossible to describe the pall<sup>51</sup> of desolation that hung over those silent villages, a desolation that seemed to be accentuated by the beauty of the surrounding country.

Upwards of a quarter of a million people were either deported or massacred by the Turks in the Lebanon hills alone; and only in the villages occupied by Circassians, whom the Turks themselves had subsidised, were there any signs of even moderate prosperity. These people, moreover, showed marked hostility towards our troops, and had to be suppressed.

When the 7th Division left Beyrout in the middle of October to march farther north to Tripoli the situation was considerably easier. Foodships had arrived, and arrangements had been made for regular supplies to be given to the people, though at first they needed medical aid rather than food, so weakened were they by long privation and want.

The chief difficulty in the distribution of supplies was the shortage of labour, for the advance had been so rapid that it had quite outdistanced the administrative branches of the service. Half a dozen R.A.S.C.<sup>52</sup> clerks and a small party of the Egyptian Labour Corps, assisted by the “Camels,”<sup>53</sup> toiled night and day at the docks: we were dock-labourers, stevedores,<sup>54</sup> and transport all in one. The fact that Beyrout was the only real port in the whole country nearer than Port Said did not tend to relieve the strain, for the natural disadvantages of Jaffa as a port prevented its being utilised to the full, while Haifa, although it possesses a magnificent harbour, had not as yet enough accommodation for ships.

Our own men now began to feel the effects of the arduous<sup>55</sup> campaign. The rainy season was imminent, and malaria and blackwater fever claimed their victims by the score.<sup>56</sup> The troops who had spent the previous five months stewing in the hothouse atmosphere of the Jordan Valley suffered particularly heavily through malignant malaria, contracted during those months, which lay dormant while operations were actually in progress and appeared when men were run down and weakened by their tremendous exertions.<sup>57</sup> The Australian Mounted Division, who had been the first to enter Damascus, were amongst the hardest hit by the disease, for the oldest city in the world is also one of the most unhealthy—or was, at all events during the time of our occupation.

The River Abana,<sup>58</sup> which runs through the city, was choked with dead horses and Turks for ten days. Hundreds of Turks wandered about, nominally prisoners, but with no one to guard them; they were far more numerous than our own men; and as the Turks generally had little idea of sanitation and less of personal cleanliness they were extremely unpleasant people to have about the place.

There were no regrets at leaving Damascus, for though the odour of sanctity may hang over the venerable city, it is as naught compared with the other odours, of which it has a greater and more pungent variety than any city in the country.

With the capture of Beyrout and Damascus hostilities had not ended, although the greater part of the Turkish Army had ceased to exist. While the 7th Division were en route to Tripoli the cavalry were making a corresponding advance in the centre, despite the ravages<sup>59</sup> caused in their ranks by malaria. Indeed, with cheerful indifference to the geographical, to say nothing of the other difficulties in the way, they proposed to ride as far as Constantinople; that, it was felt, would be the crowning point of a great ride! However, for the moment they contented themselves with occupying Homs, a town on the caravan route about a hundred miles north of Damascus. Then General Allenby ordered a further advance on Aleppo, the last stronghold of the Turks in the country; and on October 21st the 5th Cavalry Division with the armoured cars started on what was to be their last ride. It was a worthy effort: in five days they covered a hundred miles, entering the city on October 26th, preceded the day before by the troops of the King of the Hedjaz,<sup>60</sup> who had driven all the Turks away during the night.

After the capture of Aleppo, Turkey, having no army left, threw up the sponge, much to the disgust of the Australian Mounted Division, who, having reached Homs, hoped to be in at the death. Still, since theirs had been the honour of entering Damascus, it was but fitting that the 5th Cavalry Division should be the first into Aleppo, for the exploits of the two forces had been almost parallel throughout the campaign.

Thus in forty days, in the course of which the army had advanced upwards of five hundred miles, Turkey had been brought to her knees, her armies had been completely destroyed, and a country that had suffered from centuries of misrule had been cleared of the oppressor. It is, however, significant of the bitter hatred the Turks bear towards the Armenians and other races of Asia Minor, that even after the Armistice one of the chief troubles of our troops was to prevent the Turkish prisoners, who were awaiting transportation to the great camps in Egypt, from maltreating Armenians wherever and whenever they came into contact with them! Drastic measures with Turkey will have to be adopted by the Allies if these little nations are to live in comfort and security in the future.

The weeks following the surrender of Turkey were occupied by the army in feeding the people, in reinstating them on the land, and in setting up a stable form of government in the country. It is unnecessary here to enter into detail, but it may be stated that the policy which had met with universal approval in Palestine was adopted in Syria. Subject to certain obvious limitations every man was free to come and go as he pleased; and, with no restriction whatever, he could worship as he pleased, whether Christian, Mussulman, or Jew. To quote one example of the goodwill that prevailed: the head of the Greek Church in Homs offered his Cathedral to the Army for the thanksgiving service held after the signing of the general Armistice, and members of nearly every religious denomination were present at a most impressive ceremony.

The Arabs took over the government of Damascus and the surrounding country, which presumably they will retain for the future; the French, who have large interests in Beyrout and Lebanon, will, I believe, be the paramount influence there—though curiously enough, the one question we were constantly asked by the people of Beyrout was whether the British were going to take over the town; and from fifteen miles north of Acre down to the Suez Canal the country will probably be under the protection of the British. As this includes the desert of Northern Sinai the conquest of which had taken two long years, it is unlikely that we shall be accused of land-grabbing!

It is reasonably certain that Palestine will need material help for some time, for Turkish maladministration, and the iniquitously heavy taxes imposed upon the people, have almost killed initiative. So far as real development is concerned, it is almost a virgin land, and although the efforts of those responsible for the work of reconstruction are both vigorous and successful, it will be many years before Palestine is producing up to her full capacity. At present the grain crop of the entire country could be brought to England in about seven ships; in fact, before the War most of it was bought by a well-known firm of whisky distillers!

Postal and Communication Information in the 1872 Guide-Annuaire d'Égypte

compiled by Tobias Zywiets

Copyright © 2021

While searching for information, one regularly comes across—often by chance—hitherto unknown or inaccessible sources. The progress of digitisation creates more and more digital resources and makes them available over the internet. Even five years ago, one would have to visit a library and consult reference works in the reading room to gather required data.

Among such valuable resources are trade directories. They not only list the businesses trading at the time, but offer also a wide range of information, not only on trade and industry, by administration and communications. It's quite possible that one can gather all the information on the organisation of the post, postal connections, tariffs, and regulations, from specialist philatelic publications. What is different when consulting such directories: we see the information as the public using the services would have at the time.

The Egyptian directory was inaugurated in 1903 and changed its title from year to year.

- L'annuaire égyptien de l'Égypte et du Soudan. Commerce industrie, administration, magistrature, adresses mondaines.
- L'annuaire égyptien et l'indicateur égyptien réunis.
- L'annuaire égyptien : Égypte et Soudan.
- L'annuaire égyptien : du commerce, de l'industrie et la magistrature de l'Égypte et du Soudan.
- The Egyptian directory : l'annuaire égyptien du commerce de l'industrie et la magistrature de l'Égypte et du Soudan
- Indicateur égyptien administratif et commercial.

In 1912 it merged and became The Egyptian directory. L'annuaire égyptien de l'Égypte et du Soudan (25th edition); and from 1957 (71st edition) it was published as The Egyptian directory of the United Arab Republic : l'annuaire égyptien du commerce et de l'industrie.

The other is E. François-Levernay's Guide-Annuaire d'Égypte : statistique, administrations, commerce, industries, agriculture, antiquités, etc. ; avec les plans d'Alexandrie & du Caire. It apparently started in 1868 as Guide générale d'Égypte : annuaire officiel administratif, commercial et industriel. An edition for 1869 is referenced, but no information could be ascertained. It is more of a general guide rather than a dedicated trade directory: it still lists banks, traders, manufacturers, services, etc., but the focus is on the description of the country and its administration.

In a future edition, I will show pages from the The Egyptian directory of 1908, in this edition I feature excerpts pertinent to postal and communications history from the 1872 edition of the Guide-Annuaire d'Égypte:

- Currency and exchange rates: pp. 13–14.
- Telegraph services: Eastern Telegraph Co, Egyptian Telegraph: pp. 34–39.
- Railways in Egypt and Sudan: pp. 69–73.<sup>63</sup>

<sup>63</sup> Not included in this article are the railway timetables shown on pp. 74–90 of the Guide.

- Postal and merchant shipping lines: pp. 135–145.
- Postal Services at Alexandria: British, Austrian, Egyptian, French, Greek, Italian, and Russian (РОПНТ) post offices: pp. 146–159.
- Postal Services at Cairo: agents of postal shipping companies, British, Egyptian, and French post offices: pp. 294–296.
- The British and Egyptian Telegraph administrations at Cairo: pp. 311–312.
- Appendix: changes to the Messageries Maritimes schedules: p. 350.

The texts and tables are pretty much self-explanatory and easily comprehended even with only basic knowledge of the French language. So besides summarising each page's contents, I only translate some key terms where necessary.

Le Khédive possède, en outre, pour son usage particulier, au Caire et à Alexandrie, 26 kilom. de lignes télégraphiques.

La ligne du Canal de Suez, de 160 kilom., appartient à la Compagnie du Canal. Celle de Ramleh, qui longe le chemin de fer de ce nom, appartient à la Compagnie anglaise qui en est propriétaire; elle a 7 kilom. 1/2 de longueur.

Le matériel roulant des chemins de fer égyptiens en 1871 était de 260 locomotives et de 4,500 wagons.

Ces wagons se divisent ainsi :

La ligne de la Haute-Égypte sera probablement poursuivie jusqu'à Assouan et aura une longueur totale, depuis le Caire, de plus de 600 kilom.

Il y a en outre dans les Moudiries de Minieh, Assiout et le Fayoum une multitude de voies ferrées appelées lignes agricoles, reliant les parties de la province où l'on cultive la canne à sucre avec les nombreuses raffineries en activité et en construction sur les domaines de S. A. le Khédive ; le transport des cannes se fait ainsi avec rapidité et économie.

Chemin de fer du Soudan.

Vingt ingénieurs anglais, sous la direction de M. John Fowler et d'après les indications du Khédive, travaillaient depuis plusieurs années à l'étude d'un chemin de fer d'Assouan à Kartoum. Le tracé définitif, terminé au commencement de 1872, a été remis au Khédive qui le fera mettre à exécution dès que les ressources du pays le permettront. La ligne a son point de départ à Assouan et longe le Nil jusqu'à Korosco ; de Korosco elle continue à suivre le Nil passant par le nouveau et l'ancien Dongola jusqu'à Edab, au 18<sup>me</sup> degré latitude nord, où le Nil forme un long détour qui renferme le désert de Bayouda. La ligne projetée abandonne le Nil à Edab et traverse le désert dans la direction de Berber. La portion de la ligne à travers le désert aura une longueur d'environ 150 milles ; les autres portions de la ligne seront à des distances variant d'un demi-mille à un mille du fleuve.

Le manque d'eau est sans doute le motif qui a fait abandonner la ligne à travers le désert de Korosco qui abrégait le parcours de cent lieues. Selon nous, l'on pouvait facilement remédier à ce manque d'eau par une conduite pareille à celle d'Ismailia à Port-Saïd, qui aurait longé la voie et pourvu d'eau potable tout ce parcours et aurait permis même de créer des oasis à chaque station. On sait que l'eau des puits dans tous ces déserts est salée ; car le sol contient une grande quantité de sel mêlé au sol. Quand on creuse un puits, l'eau est tout à fait impotable ; mais à mesure qu'on épuise ses eaux elles perdent peu à peu leur intensité saline et avec le temps elles finissent par être potables. C'est ce qui est arrivé aux puits de Bir-Murah.

Jules Poncet, dans un rapport au Vice-Roi, avait proposé une autre combinaison plus économique, plus politique et plus lucrative. Elle consistait à mettre Kartoum à quatre journées de Suez au moyen d'un service de bateaux de Suez à Souakim et d'un chemin de fer de Souakim à Kartoum. Ce chemin de fer n'aurait coûté que le quart de l'autre, soit environ 100,000,000 ; il aurait traversé des pays plus productifs, aurait permis, en cas de besoin, de jeter rapidement une armée en Abyssinie et aurait amené de grandes relations commerciales avec le Tigre.

Ces projets de chemins de fer à travers le Soudan se rattachent aux résultats que l'on attend de l'expédition de Sir Samuel Baker, qui a pour but d'explorer la région des grands lacs équatoriaux et du Nil au-delà de Gondokoro, d'abolir l'esclavage sur le Nil Blanc et de nouer des relations commerciales et politiques avec les peuples plus ou moins sauvages qui habitent ces contrées.

<sup>65</sup> Instead a line Khartoum to Port Sudan, further north, was completed by 1906, only a branch line extended to Suakin. There was a short-lived military line Suakin to Berber in 1885, but only 20 miles were laid from Suakin.

Wanted: Israel's Triangular Military Unit Handstamps

There are 3 styles of triangular Handstamps used on Military Mail in Israel. The first style lowest numbers were used from 1948 to about 1960. I am trying to collect all of these and am still missing a few numbers. The mid period ran from approximately 1960 to 1980.

I have almost a complete run of these numbers but am still looking for a few of them including 1014, 1021, 1032, 1035, 1043, 1048, 1049, 1060, 1091, 1094 and 1098 and a few others. The most recent zero series style started about 1980 and is still in use. Zero series numbers I am looking for include 01433, 01455, 01526, 01636, 01833 to 01860, 02129 and 03350.

I am trying to collect all the numbers and I estimate that there are over 5000 issued across the 3 styles. I am also looking for your lists of numbers to check against my database. All correspondence and offers to trade material welcome.

The Institute of Postal Historical Studies "Aldo Cecchi" Prato, Tuscany, Italy

When you study postal history, you investigate on organized communication, particularly focusing on material aspects. This is a new, productive approach connecting different subjects, such as social history and history of culture, epistolography, history of management and of entrepreneurship, paleography, diplomatics, economic history, historical geography, history of journalism and of commerce, collecting.

Since 1982, in Prato, Istituto di Studi Storici Postali "Aldo Cecchi" has been an international reference centre for those concerned. The Institute is aimed at building, improving and sharing knowledge of the postal-historical subjects through publications, courses, workshops, exhibitions, and other cultural events.

One of the highlights of the Institute is his role as a specialized library, collecting guidebooks and old postal maps as well as modern philatelic editions. The library includes more than 13,000 items (volumes and booklets). Over time, the library has become a proper documentation centre on organized postal communication. The library is divided into special sections: the periodicals section contains almost 2,000 titles. The special collection of commercial philatelic publications (auction catalogues, fixed-price offers, promotional material, traders' price lists) numbers 15,000 items.

Last but not least, the Institute also holds an archival fond which is extraordinarily important for the history of Italian postal communications: the archive of the "Direzione Superiore della Posta Militare" (High office for Military Mail), containing some 400,000 original documents about its activity during the 20th century.

As you may understand, books and publications on postal-historical topics are welcome and ready to be inserted in the always-growing catalogue which can be consulted online. You are therefore invited to send us your publications: they will be available to the international community of philatelists!

The Oriental Philatelic Association of London

ORIENTAL PHILATELIC ASSOCIATION OF LONDON

The Oriental Philatelic Association of London was founded in 1949. Its remit is very broad both geographically and historically as it covers all philatelic aspects of post within the former Ottoman Empire and all its myriad successor states. Nevertheless many members specialise in one small area. Over one third of our membership of over 150 lives abroad, with a particular large number in the USA.

OPAL publishes a couple of journals per year along with a couple of newsletters. Both publications are also used to answer members' queries. If our extensive library can't help with queries, then our membership invariably contains someone who can help, however specialised or esoteric. There are informal meetings held in various UK locations as well as our annual get together for our AGM.

Membership costs presently £5 per annum. Further details can be found on and contacts can be made via OPAL's website: www.mclstamps.co.uk/opal/opalhome.html.

Dr. Andreas Birken †

Handbook of Turkish Philately – Part I: Ottoman Empire

Vol. 4: The Ottoman Postmarks

“Die Poststempel / The Postmarks” by the late Dr. Andreas Birken is a bilingual (German and English) catalogue of Ottoman postmarks, including both postal and censor markings.

In 1999 Turkey philatelists held their 4th World Meeting at London. The member societies OPAL, AROS, and TOPS (now ONEPS) launched the Ottoman Postmark Project to continue the work of pioneer philatelists like Orhan Brandt, Saik Ceylân, John H. Coles, Howard E. Walker and Hilmi Bayındır, with the aim of producing a data-base collecting and comparing all available and new information.

In 2002 Dr. Andreas Birken took on the task of bringing the project to a form usable to all interested collectors. The result is a periodically updated eBook, consisting of PDF-files, one for each vilayet, presenting all the known postmarks.

After the death of Dr. Birken AROS is now able to offer the postmark catalogue of the Ottoman Empire in the latest available version of March 2019:

Version	CD-ROM or USB-Stick	Download
Complete Catalogue	52.00 €	50.00 €
Index + Introduction + individual group of vilayets	–	10.00 €
P&P (Germany)	2.00 €	–
P&P (worldwide)	4.00 €	–

Owners of an earlier version of the catalogue will be granted a discount: The price is then 10.00 € (plus shipping, if applicable). Please send me a photo of the CD as proof.

Payment by SEPA transfer, PayPal, and Skrill.

Editorial

by Tobias Zywiets (mep-bulletin@zobbel.de)
 Publisher & Editor, The Middle East Philatelic Bulletin

In this Issue

MEPB 18 opens with a light thematic topic: Hubert Gerzabek's text about Islamic Art has been illustrated with stamps, postcards, and other material. With Covid-19 still spreading throughout the world, we take a philatelic look at past epidemics: I unearthed two contemporaneous reports about quarantine treatment in 19th century Turkey and about the 1902 Cholera Epidemic in Palestine. Folkert Bruining furthers his research in the postal connections of Perim Island.

Turkish censorship in WWI is covered in two articles: Philip Longbottom looks at Censor Seals, while Hans Paul Soetens starts a series of articles cataloguing censor hand-stamps. Jens Warnecke reports about the Red Crescent Exhibition in Constantinople and Hakan Berkil shows us the earliest Ottoman IRC from Smyrna. Rainer Fuchs reports on the rivalry between the British and French overland services and Avo Kaplanian opens the door to another fascinating part of his collections: Transjordan Proofs and Essays. Laurence Fisher and Ofir Winter report on the World Refugee Year, Max Michel Mann presents a cover from Palestine to Iceland and David K. Smith looks at the postal card issued on King Hussein's 50th birthday in 1985.

John A. Courtis looks at newspaper wrappers and their rarity according to market offerings in the past 10 years. Book Reviews include works on the Mohamad Aly Post, the Bombay–Aden Sea Post Office, and Prisoners of War in WWI. I take a very critical look at how a 'new discovery' is marketed without any certification.

The Reactions, Comments, Queries section contains a wide range of subjects and welcomes contributors with their short pieces, reactions to articles, and requests. The Archive section features four articles: Léon T. Adjemian reports about Turkey's pre-paid and ship-mail markings in 1896/97. The Great Famine on Mount Lebanon is subject of a British soldier's recollections; I prepared an introduction and Bernardo Longo and 'LibanPhil' provided additional material. The section concludes with postal and communications information found in the 1872 Guide-Annuaire d'Égypte.

Contributions

I will consider any article of quality for potential inclusion: be it a large article with original research, a small piece looking at a particular aspect, a concise description of an interesting cover, or a long-forgotten piece of research rediscovered. It can be original writing, or material already published. I will help, advise, and guide. Translation into English can be arranged, and all steps and processes are closely coordinated with the author.

If you think you can contribute to the journal, please do not hesitate to contact me!

Articles should be submitted as plain text (TXT), rich text (RTF), LibreOffice/OpenOffice (ODT), MS Word (DOC, DOCX) or Adobe Acrobat (PDF). Images can be JPEG/JPG- or PNG-files in 300dpi (or higher) resolution. Rights to texts and images not belonging to the author should be cleared, or at least be flagged-up, so that I can deal with any such issues. If in doubt: just ask! I will strive to resolve any such occurring problems.

Acknowledgements

I'd like to thank all contributors and all those aiding and encouraging me in the creation of this journal. The list would be too long to print here, so I mention just one non-philatelist, who, as native speaker, helped me with proofreading and gave advice on style of writing, namely Colin Booth. Several organisations and persons gave me general permission to reprint articles from their journals and archives. One person I have especially to thank is Barry D. Hoffman, copyright owner of F. W. Pollack's THE HOLY LAND PHILATELIST. Many thanks to all!

Ot Louw

an obituary by Folkert Bruining

“these are a few of my favourite things ...”

Just before Christmas 2020, the COVID-19 virus caught Ot. It hasn't let him go. He passed away on 22nd January 2021. He celebrated his birthday at the beginning of January, albeit in the hospital. He reached the age of 75 years. The funeral card said film editor, bookmaker, philatelist, beer lover, bon vivant. This is all very recognizable to those who have known him.

Ot Louw was a celebrity in the film and television world. As an editor, he has transformed the 'raw' material of film directors into beautiful movies or television programmes. For example, ask 'Van Kooten and De Bie.'<sup>1</sup> In 1992 this earned him a 'Gouden Kalf'<sup>2</sup> for his montages. But even after 1992 he has received many prizes at home and abroad, including a nomination for a second 'Gouden Kalf'. He has an impressive track record on Wikipedia.

I met Ot in 2000. He was a member of a study and work group that intended to compile a book about the foreign post offices in the Ottoman Empire. Especially because of his skills in the field of drawing up documents, Ot was asked to join. The book was published in 2010, of course not in a large circulation, but it was sold out almost immediately.

A number of philatelic books, written in whole or in part, are worth mentioning here. “Europa geperforeerd : 150 jaar Europese geschiedenis aan de hand van postzegels”<sup>3</sup> (1998). The book on the occasion of the eightieth anniversary of the Amsterdamsche Postzegel Societeit (APS)<sup>4</sup> in 2017. “Postal Labels in the Dutch East Indies & Indonesia” (2019). Ot and I were still working on the book “British Indian post offices in the French settlements in India”. The future will tell what happens to that study.

Ot was a member of various philatelic associations such as Po & Po,<sup>5</sup> and, already mentioned, the Amsterdamsche Postzegel Societeit. And of course he was a member of the local stamp association in Bussum, because that’s where he lived. He was also a member of the Netherlands Academy for Philately. He exhibited and also won prizes.

What was Ot’s connection to our association AL BARĪD? He was not a member, but he was involved and knew a number of members well. He was interested to a great extent in the areas of focus of AL BARĪD. And he wanted to do quite a bit for our magazine, both for the design as well as for the content. Years ago, I think in 2015, this is how a collaboration with Ot started in this field. A collaboration that was, in the first place, very pleasant and which also resulted in beautiful issues of our magazine AL BARĪD. Just think of the specials on the Hejaz Railway and the First World War in the Near East with the title “Battle, occupation and mandate ...” But also a number of regular issues of our magazine. I used to say to him: “you turned it into a movie again.” As already has been said, working with Ot was a pleasure. Hours of skypeing, tinkering with the text, just put it in the dropbox, address each other in a pedantic way (“Why don’t you know this at all...?”). We both enjoyed it. The collaboration became a friendship over the years.

The board of our society has written a letter to his wife Marian, also on behalf of the members, expressing its gratitude and appreciation of our association for Ot’s contributions. This may be a comfort to her and her beloved ones.

We will miss Ot very much.

1. Auskunftsrecht

Sie können von dem Verantwortlichen eine Bestätigung darüber verlangen, ob personenbezogene Daten, die Sie betreffen, von mir verarbeitet werden. Liegt eine solche Verarbeitung vor, können Sie von dem Verantwortlichen über folgende Informationen Auskunft verlangen:

- (1) die Zwecke, zu denen die personenbezogenen Daten verarbeitet werden;
- (2) die Kategorien von personenbezogenen Daten, welche verarbeitet werden;
- (3) die Empfänger bzw. die Kategorien von Empfängern, gegenüber denen die Sie betreffenden personenbezogenen Daten offengelegt wurden oder noch offengelegt werden;
- (4) die geplante Dauer der Speicherung der Sie betreffenden personenbezogenen Daten oder, falls konkrete Angaben hierzu nicht möglich sind, Kriterien für die Festlegung der Speicherdauer;
- (5) das Bestehen eines Rechts auf Berichtigung oder Löschung der Sie betreffenden personenbezogenen Daten, eines Rechts auf Einschränkung der Verarbeitung durch den Verantwortlichen oder eines Widerspruchsrechts gegen diese Verarbeitung;
- (6) das Bestehen eines Beschwerderechts bei einer

Aufsichtsbehörde;

(7) alle verfügbaren Informationen über die Herkunft der Daten, wenn die personenbezogenen Daten nicht bei der betroffenen Person erhoben werden;

(8) das Bestehen einer automatisierten Entscheidungsfindung einschließlich Profiling gemäß Art. 22 Abs. 1 und 4 DSGVO und – zumindest in diesen Fällen – aussagekräftige Informationen über die involvierte Logik sowie die Tragweite und die angestrebten Auswirkungen einer derartigen Verarbeitung für die betroffene Person.

Ihnen steht das Recht zu, Auskunft darüber zu verlangen, ob die Sie betreffenden personenbezogenen Daten in ein Drittland oder an eine internationale Organisation übermittelt werden. In diesem Zusammenhang können Sie verlangen, über die geeigneten Garantien gem. Art. 46 DSGVO im Zusammenhang mit der Übermittlung unterrichtet zu werden.

Dieses Auskunftsrecht kann insoweit beschränkt werden, als es voraussichtlich die Verwirklichung der Forschungs- oder Statistikzwecke unmöglich macht oder ernsthaft beeinträchtigt und die Beschränkung für die Erfüllung der Forschungs- oder Statistikzwecke notwendig ist.

2. Recht auf Berichtigung

Sie haben ein Recht auf Berichtigung und/oder Vervollständigung gegenüber dem Verantwortlichen, sofern die verarbeiteten personenbezogenen Daten, die Sie betreffen, unrichtig oder unvollständig sind. Der Verantwortliche hat die Berichtigung unverzüglich vorzunehmen.

Ihr Recht auf Berichtigung kann insoweit beschränkt werden, als es voraussichtlich die Verwirklichung der Forschungs- oder Statistikzwecke unmöglich macht oder ernsthaft beeinträchtigt und die Beschränkung für die Erfüllung der Forschungs- oder Statistikzwecke notwendig ist.

3. Recht auf Einschränkung der Verarbeitung

Unter den folgenden Voraussetzungen können Sie die Einschränkung der Verarbeitung der Sie betreffenden personenbezogenen Daten verlangen:

- (1) wenn Sie die Richtigkeit der Sie betreffenden personenbezogenen für eine Dauer bestreiten, die es dem Verantwortlichen ermöglicht, die Richtigkeit der personenbezogenen Daten zu überprüfen;
- (2) die Verarbeitung unrechtmäßig ist und Sie die Löschung der personenbezogenen Daten ablehnen und stattdessen die Einschränkung der Nutzung der personenbezogenen Daten verlangen;
- (3) der Verantwortliche die personenbezogenen Daten für die Zwecke der Verarbeitung nicht länger benötigt, Sie diese jedoch zur Geltendmachung, Ausübung oder Verteidigung von Rechtsansprüchen benötigen, oder
- (4) wenn Sie Widerspruch gegen die Verarbeitung gemäß Art. 21 Abs. 1 DSGVO eingelegt haben und noch nicht feststeht, ob die berechtigten Gründe des Verantwortlichen gegenüber Ihren Gründen überwiegen. Wurde die Verarbeitung der Sie betreffenden personenbezogenen Daten eingeschränkt, dürfen diese Daten – von ihrer Speicherung abgesehen – nur mit Ihrer Einwilligung oder zur Geltendmachung, Ausübung oder Verteidigung von Rechtsansprüchen oder zum Schutz der Rechte einer anderen natürlichen oder juristischen Person oder aus Gründen eines wichtigen öffentlichen Interesses der Union oder eines Mitgliedstaats verarbeitet werden.

Wurde die Einschränkung der Verarbeitung nach den o.g. Voraussetzungen eingeschränkt, werden Sie von dem Verantwortlichen unterrichtet bevor die Einschränkung aufgehoben wird.

Ihr Recht auf Einschränkung der Verarbeitung kann insoweit beschränkt werden, als es voraussichtlich die Verwirklichung der Forschungs- oder Statistikzwecke unmöglich macht oder ernsthaft beeinträchtigt und die Beschränkung für die Erfüllung der Forschungs- oder Statistikzwecke notwendig ist.

4. Recht auf Löschung

a) Löschungspflicht

Sie können von dem Verantwortlichen verlangen, dass die Sie betreffenden personenbezogenen Daten unverzüglich gelöscht werden, und der Verantwortliche ist verpflichtet, diese Daten unverzüglich zu löschen, sofern einer der folgenden Gründe zutrifft:

- (1) Die Sie betreffenden personenbezogenen Daten sind für die Zwecke, für die sie erhoben oder auf sonstige Weise verarbeitet wurden, nicht mehr notwendig.

- (5) Die Löschung der Sie betreffenden personenbezogenen Daten ist zur Erfüllung einer rechtlichen Verpflichtung nach dem Unionsrecht oder dem Recht der Mitgliedstaaten erforderlich, dem der Verantwortliche unterliegt.
- (6) Die Sie betreffenden personenbezogenen Daten wurden in Bezug auf angebotene Dienste der Informationsgesellschaft gemäß Art. 8 Abs. 1 DSGVO erhoben.

b) Information an Dritte

Hat der Verantwortliche die Sie betreffenden personenbezogenen Daten öffentlich gemacht und ist er gem. Art. 17 Abs. 1 DSGVO zu deren Löschung verpflichtet, so trifft er unter Berücksichtigung der verfügbaren Technologie und der Implementierungskosten angemessene Maßnahmen, auch technischer Art, um für die Datenverarbeitung Verantwortliche, die die personenbezogenen Daten verarbeiten, darüber zu informieren, dass Sie als betroffene Person von ihnen die Löschung aller Links zu diesen personenbezogenen Daten oder von Kopien oder Replikationen dieser personenbezogenen Daten verlangt haben.

c) Ausnahmen

Das Recht auf Löschung besteht nicht, soweit die Verarbeitung erforderlich ist

- (1) zur Ausübung des Rechts auf freie Meinungsäußerung und Information;
- (2) zur Erfüllung einer rechtlichen Verpflichtung, die die Verarbeitung nach dem Recht der Union oder der Mitgliedstaaten, dem der Verantwortliche unterliegt, erfordert, oder zur Wahrnehmung einer Aufgabe, die im öffentlichen Interesse liegt oder in Ausübung öffentlicher Gewalt erfolgt, die dem Verantwortlichen übertragen wurde;
- (3) aus Gründen des öffentlichen Interesses im Bereich der öffentlichen Gesundheit gemäß Art. 9 Abs. 2 lit. h und i sowie Art. 9 Abs. 3 DSGVO
- (4) für im öffentlichen Interesse liegende Archivzwecke, wissenschaftliche oder historische Forschungszwecke oder für statistische Zwecke gem. Art. 89 Abs. 1 DSGVO, soweit das unter Abschnitt a) genannte Recht voraussichtlich die Verwirklichung der Ziele dieser Verarbeitung unmöglich macht oder ernsthaft beeinträchtigt, oder
- (5) zur Geltendmachung, Ausübung oder Verteidigung von Rechtsansprüchen.

5. Recht auf Unterrichtung

Haben Sie das Recht auf Berichtigung, Löschung oder Einschränkung der Verarbeitung gegenüber dem Verantwortlichen geltend gemacht, ist dieser verpflichtet, allen Empfängern, denen die Sie betreffenden personenbezogenen Daten offengelegt wurden, diese Berichtigung oder Löschung der Daten oder Einschränkung der Verarbeitung mitzuteilen, es sei denn, dies erweist sich als unmöglich oder ist mit einem unverhältnismäßigen Aufwand verbunden. Ihnen steht gegenüber dem Verantwortlichen das Recht zu, über diese Empfänger unterrichtet zu werden.

6. Recht auf Datenübertragbarkeit

Sie haben das Recht, die Sie betreffenden personenbezogenen Daten, die Sie dem Verantwortlichen bereitgestellt haben, in einem strukturierten, gängigen und maschinenlesbaren Format zu erhalten. Außerdem haben Sie das Recht diese Daten einem anderen Verantwortlichen ohne Behinderung durch den Verantwortlichen, dem die personenbezogenen Daten bereitgestellt wurden, zu übermitteln, sofern

- (1) die Verarbeitung auf einer Einwilligung gem. Art. 6 Abs. 1 lit. a DSGVO oder Art. 9 Abs. 2 lit. a DSGVO oder auf einem Vertrag gem. Art. 6 Abs. 1 lit. b DSGVO beruht und
- (2) die Verarbeitung mithilfe automatisierter Verfahren erfolgt.

In Ausübung dieses Rechts haben Sie ferner das Recht, zu erwirken, dass die Sie betreffenden personenbezogenen Daten direkt von einem Verantwortlichen einem anderen Verantwortlichen übermittelt werden, soweit dies technisch machbar ist. Freiheiten und Rechte anderer Personen dürfen hierdurch nicht beeinträchtigt werden.

Das Recht auf Datenübertragbarkeit gilt nicht für eine Verarbeitung personenbezogener Daten, die für die Wahrnehmung einer Aufgabe erforderlich ist, die im öffentlichen Interesse liegt oder in Ausübung öffentlicher Gewalt erfolgt, die dem Verantwortlichen übertragen wurde.

7. Widerspruchsrecht

Sie haben das Recht, aus Gründen, die sich aus ihrer besonderen Situation ergeben, jederzeit gegen die Verarbeitung der Sie betreffenden personenbezogenen Daten, die aufgrund von Art. 6 Abs. 1 lit. e oder f DSGVO erfolgt, Widerspruch einzulegen; dies gilt auch für ein auf diese Bestimmungen gestütztes Profiling.

Der Verantwortliche verarbeitet die Sie betreffenden personenbezogenen Daten nicht mehr, es sei denn, er kann zwingende schutzwürdige Gründe für die Verarbeitung nachweisen, die Ihre Interessen, Rechte und Freiheiten überwiegen, oder die Verarbeitung dient der Geltendmachung, Ausübung oder Verteidigung von Rechtsansprüchen.

Werden die Sie betreffenden personenbezogenen Daten verarbeitet, um Direktwerbung zu betreiben, haben Sie das Recht, jederzeit Widerspruch gegen die Verarbeitung der Sie betreffenden personenbezogenen Daten zum Zwecke derartiger Werbung einzulegen; dies gilt auch für das Profiling, soweit es mit solcher Direktwerbung in Verbindung steht.

Widersprechen Sie der Verarbeitung für Zwecke der Direktwerbung, so werden die Sie betreffenden personenbezogenen Daten nicht mehr für diese Zwecke verarbeitet.

Data Protection Policy

All references are to the German text of the General Data Protection Regulations (GDPR, German: Datenschutz-Grundverordnung, DSGVO).

Data protection is of particular importance to me. Use of my electronic journal pages is possible without any indication of personal data.

The processing of personal data, such as the name and e-mail address of a person, is always carried out in accordance with the General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR) and in accordance with the country-specific data protection regulations applicable to me. By means of this data protection declaration I would like to inform the public about the type, scope and purpose of the personal data collected, used and processed by me. Furthermore, data subjects will be informed of their rights by means of this data protection declaration.

As data controller, I have implemented numerous technical and organisational measures to ensure the utmost protection of the personal data processed via this website. Nevertheless, Internet-based data transmissions, like e-mail, may in principle contain security risks, so that absolute protection cannot be guaranteed. For this reason, every person concerned is free to transmit personal data to me also in alternative ways.

I. Name and address of the person responsible

The person responsible in the sense of the General Data Protection Regulation and other national data protection laws of EU member states as well as other data protection regulations is:

Tobias Zywiets

II. General information about data processing

1. Scope of processing of personal data

In general, I only process personal data of users if this is necessary to provide information by way of a mailing-list. The further processing of personal data only takes place with the user's consent.

2. Legal basis for the processing of personal data

Insofar as I obtain the consent of the data subject for the processing of personal data, Art. 6 para. 1 lit. a EU General Data Protection Regulation serves as the legal basis for the processing of personal data.

In the processing of personal data required for the performance of a contract to which the data subject is a party, Art. 6 para. 1 lit. b DSGVO serves as the legal basis. This also applies to processing operations that are necessary to carry out pre-contractual measures.

As far as the processing of personal data is necessary for the fulfilment of a legal obligation, which is subject to me, Art. 6 Abs. 1 lit. c DSGVO serves as legal basis.

In the event that the vital interests of the data subject or another natural person require the processing of personal data, Article 6(1)(d) DSGVO serves as the legal basis.

If processing is necessary to safeguard a legitimate interest of mine or of a third party and if the interests, fundamental rights and freedoms of the data subject do not outweigh the former interest, Art. 6 para. 1 lit. f DSGVO serves as the legal basis for processing.

3. Deletion time of data and storage

The personal data of the person concerned will be deleted or blocked as soon as the purpose of storage ceases to apply. Furthermore, data may be stored if this has been provided for by the European or national legislators' regulations, laws or other provisions to which the person responsible is subject. The data will also be blocked or deleted if a storage period prescribed by the aforementioned standards expires, unless there is a need for further storage of the data for the conclusion or fulfilment of a contract.

III. Mailing-List

Every user is free to subscribe for free to my mailing list via e-mail. This does not create any obligations for the user.

1. Description and scope of data processing

The following data is collected:

1. surname and first name of the user
2. e-mail address of the user

2. Legal basis for data processing

The legal basis for the temporary storage of data is Art. 6 para. 1 DSGVO.

3. Purpose of data processing

The purpose of the mailing list is to provide the user with information about the contents and appearance of the journal.

4. Storage duration

The user can leave the mailing list at any time. The data will be deleted immediately.

5. Possibility of objection and elimination

The collection of data for the provision of the mailing list is absolutely necessary for the operation of the mailing list. Consequently, there is no possibility of objection on the part of the user. The user can, however, object to the storage at any time and thus leave the mailing list.

IV. E-Mail contact

1. Description and scope of data processing

You can contact me via the e-mail address provided on my website. In this case, the user's personal data transmitted by e-mail will be stored. In this context, the data will not be passed on to third parties. The data is used exclusively for processing the conversation.

V. Rights of the person concerned

If your personal data is processed, you are affected within the meaning of the DSGVO and you have the following rights vis-à-vis the person responsible:

1. The right to information

You can ask the person in charge to confirm whether personal data concerning you will be processed by me. If such processing is available, you can request the following information from the person responsible:

- (1) the purposes for which the personal data are processed;
- (2) the categories of personal data processed;
- (3) the recipients or categories of recipients to whom the personal data concerning you have been or are still being disclosed;
- (4) the planned duration of the storage of the personal data concerning you or, if specific information on this is not possible, criteria for determining the storage period;
- (5) the existence of a right to rectification or deletion of personal data concerning you, a right to limitation of processing by the controller or a right to object to such processing;
- (6) the existence of a right of appeal to a supervisory authority;
- (7) any available information on the origin of the data if the personal data are not collected from the data subject;
- (8) the existence of automated decision-making including profiling in accordance with Art. 22 para. 1 and 4 DSGVO and – at least in these cases – meaningful information on the logic involved and the scope and intended effects of such processing for the data subject.

You have the right to request information as to whether the personal data concerning you is transferred to a third country or to an international organisation. In this context, you may request to be informed of the appropriate guarantees pursuant to Art. 46 DSGVO in connection with the transmission. This right to information may be limited to the extent that it is likely to make it impossible or seriously impair the realisation of research or statistical purposes and the limitation is necessary for the fulfilment of research or statistical purposes.

2. The right of correction

You have a right of rectification and/or completion vis-à-vis the data controller if the personal data processed concerning you are incorrect or incomplete. The person responsible shall make the correction without delay.

Your right to correction may be limited to the extent that it is likely to render impossible or seriously prejudicial the achievement of the research or statistical purposes and the limitation is necessary for the fulfilment of the research or statistical purposes.

3. Right to limitation of processing

Under the following conditions, you may request that the processing of personal data concerning you be restricted:

- (1) if you dispute the accuracy of the personal data concerning you for a period that enables the data controller to verify the accuracy of the personal data;
- (2) the processing is unlawful and you refuse to delete the personal data and instead request the restriction of the use of the personal data;
- (3) the data controller no longer needs the personal data for the purposes of the processing, but you do need them to assert, exercise or defend legal claims, or (4) if you have filed an objection to the processing pursuant to Art. 21 para. 1 DSGVO and it has not yet been determined whether the legitimate reasons of the person responsible outweigh your reasons. If the processing of personal data concerning you has been restricted, such data may only be processed - apart from being stored - with your consent or for the purpose of asserting, exercising or defending rights or protecting the rights of another natural or legal person or on grounds of an important public interest of the Union or a Member State.

If the processing restriction has been limited according to the above conditions, you will be informed by the person responsible before the restriction is lifted.

Your right to limitation of processing may be limited to the extent that it is likely to render impossible or seriously prejudicial the achievement of research or statistical purposes and the restriction is necessary for the fulfilment of research or statistical purposes.

4. The right of deletion

a) Duty of deletion

You may request the data controller to delete the personal data relating to you immediately, and the data controller is obliged to delete this data immediately, if one of the following reasons applies:

- (1) The personal data concerning you are no longer necessary for the purposes for which they were collected or otherwise processed.
- (2) You revoke your consent, on which the processing was based pursuant to Art. 6 para. 1 lit. a or Art. 9 para. 2 lit. a DSGVO, and there is no other legal basis for the processing.
- (3) You file an objection against the processing pursuant to Art. 21 para. 1 DSGVO and there are no overriding legitimate reasons for the processing, or you file an objection against the processing pursuant to Art. 21 para. 2 DSGVO.
- (4) The personal data concerning you have been processed unlawfully.
- (5) The deletion of personal data relating to you is necessary to fulfil a legal obligation under Union law or the law of the Member States to which the data controller is subject.
- (6) The personal data concerning you were collected in relation to information society services offered pursuant to Art. 8 para. 1 DSGVO.

b) Information to third parties

If the data controller has made the personal data concerning you public and is obliged to delete it pursuant to Art. 17 para. 1 DSGVO, he shall take appropriate measures, including technical measures, taking into account the available technology and the implementation costs, to inform data processors who process the personal data that you as the data subject have requested the deletion of all links to this personal data or of copies or replications of this personal data.

c) Exceptions

The right to cancellation does not exist if the processing is necessary

- (1) to exercise freedom of expression and information;
- (2) to fulfil a legal obligation required for processing under the law of the Union or of the Member States to which the controller is subject, or to perform a task in the public interest or in the exercise of official authority conferred on the controller
- (3) for reasons of public interest in the field of public health pursuant to Art. 9 para. 2 lit. h and i and Art. 9 para. 3 DSGVO;
- (4) for archiving purposes in the public interest, scientific or historical research purposes or for statistical purposes pursuant to Art. 89 para. 1 DSGVO, insofar as the law referred to under a) is likely to make it impossible or seriously impair the attainment of the objectives of such processing, or
- (5) to assert, exercise or defend legal claims.

5. Right to information

If you have exercised your right to have the data controller correct, delete or limit the processing, he/she is obliged to inform all recipients to whom the personal data concerning you have been disclosed of this correction or deletion of the data or restriction on processing, unless this proves impossible or involves a disproportionate effort. Recipients have the right vis-à-vis the person responsible to be informed about these recipients.

6. Right to data transferability

You have the right to receive the personal data concerning you that you have provided to the person responsible in a structured, common and machine-readable format. In addition, you have the right to transmit this data to another person in charge without obstruction by the person in charge to whom the personal data was provided, provided

(1) processing is based on consent pursuant to Art. 6 para. 1 lit. a DSGVO or Art. 9 para. 2 lit. a DSGVO or on a contract pursuant to Art. 6 para. 1 lit. b DSGVO and

(2) processing is carried out by means of automated methods

In exercising this right, you also have the right to request that the personal data concerning you be transferred directly from one data controller to another data controller, insofar as this is technically feasible. The freedoms and rights of other persons must not be affected by this.

The right to transferability shall not apply to the processing of personal data necessary for the performance of a task in the public interest or in the exercise of official authority conferred on the controller.

7. Right of objection

You have the right to object at any time, for reasons arising from your particular situation, to the processing of personal data concerning you under Article 6(1)(e) or (f) of the DSGVO; this also applies to profiling based on these provisions.

The data controller no longer processes the personal data concerning you, unless he can prove compelling reasons worthy of protection for the processing, which outweigh your interests, rights and freedoms, or the processing serves to assert, exercise or defend legal claims.

If the personal data concerning you are processed for direct marketing purposes, you have the right to object at any time to the processing of the personal data concerning you for the purpose of such advertising; this also applies to profiling, insofar as it is associated with such direct marketing.

If you object to the processing for direct marketing purposes, the personal data concerning you will no longer be processed for these purposes.

You have the possibility to exercise your right of objection in connection with the use of Information Society services by means of automated procedures using technical specifications, notwithstanding Directive 2002/58/EC.

For data processing for scientific, historical or statistical research purposes:

You also have the right to object to the processing of personal data concerning you for scientific or historical research purposes or for statistical purposes pursuant to Art. 89 para. 1 DSGVO for reasons arising from your particular situation.

Your right of objection may be limited to the extent that it is likely to make it impossible or seriously impair the realisation of the research or statistical purposes and the limitation is necessary for the fulfilment of the research or statistical purposes.

8. Right to revoke the declaration of consent

You have the right to revoke your data protection declaration of consent at any time. The revocation of consent shall not affect the legality of the processing carried out on the basis of the consent until revocation.

9. Right of appeal to a supervisory authority

Without prejudice to any other administrative or judicial remedy, you have the right of appeal to a supervisory authority, in particular in the EU member state where you reside, work or suspect the infringement, if you believe that the processing of personal data concerning you is contrary to the DSGVO.

The supervisory authority to which the complaint has been submitted shall inform the complainant of the status and results of the complaint, including the possibility of a judicial remedy under Article 78 DSGVO.
